Gen. Bradley Appointed Veterans' Administration Head

President Names Army Leader to Hines' Post

Herzog Is Appointed Chairman of NLRB; Symington, Hutson Get Important Jobs

By Ben W. Gilbert

President Truman yesterday named Gen. Omar Bradley, American deputy to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, as administrator of veteran affairs with an injunction to modernize the Veterans' Administration.

In a press conference which he packed with changes in top-drawer Government posts, the President disclosed that he had accepted the resignation of Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, who has been veterans' administrator for 22 years, but would find another post for Hines.

Other Important Changes

Other personnel changes revealed by the Chief Executive included:

1. Paul M. Herzog, former chairman of the New York State (Little Wagner Act) Labor Relations Board, now a naval lieutenant assigned to labor relations work, was named chairman of the National Labor Relations Board succeeding Harry A. Millis, who resigned because of ill health. Herzog was named both to the term expiring August 26 and the succeeding five-year term.

2. W. Stuart Symington, president of Emerson Electric Co., St. Louis, was named chairman of the Surplus Property Board replacing former Senator Guy M. Gillette who asked to be relieved because he was not happy with the job.

3. John B. Hutson, deputy to Mobilizer Fred M. Vinson, was named Undersecretary of Agriculture, succeeding Grover B. Hill who resigned to return to private business.

4. General Hines' resignation from the related post of director of reemployment and retraining also was accepted, but Bradley was not named to the job which has over-all responsibility for postwar job planning for GIs and displaced war workers. The President said he has other plans for the post which was given little attention by Hines.

Needs Veteran of War No. 2

Appointment of the four-star general who commanded the Twelfth Army group in Europe was designed, Truman explained, to place in charge of the Veterans Administration, a veteran of this war.

As a serviceman of World War I, the President said, he would not have been happy to have had a veteran of the Spanish-American War handling veterans affairs.

No Hampering In War Trials, Jackson Says

By George Connery

America considers the whole Nazi plan of brutality and domination a crime and is prepared to cut through any "obstructive and dilatory tactics" of the defendants to enforce swift but fair justice.

Supreme Court Justice Robert H. Jackson yesterday made this clear in a report to President Truman, who said he agreed completely with this country's chief prosecutor of Axis war criminals.

Fair Hearings Required

Innocence or guilt of the accused will be determined after a hearing "as dispassionate as the times and the horrors we deal with will permit, and upon a record that will leave our reasons and motives clear," Jackson pledged.

But he indicated bluntly that the accused would have little opportunity to turn the hearings into international sounding boards.

"These hearings must not be regarded in the same light as a trial under our system, where defense is a matter of constitutional right," he declared. "Fair hearings for the accused are, of course, required to make sure that we punish only the right men and for the right reasons. But the procedure of these hearings may properly bar obstructive and dilatory tactics resorted to by defendants in our ordinary criminal trials."

Precedent Not Needed

Because international law is a product of innovations and revisions necessitated by changing circumstances, Jackson said he was "not disturbed by the lack of precedent for the inquiry we propose to conduct."

However, he emphasized the importance of a correct legal position as essential to future orderly international relations. "Now we stand at one of those rare moments when the thought and institutions and habits of the world have been shaken by the impact of world war on the lives of countless millions."

Then Jackson stated the guiding policy of the system of prosecutions:

"We are put under a heavy re-

Truman Favors Congress' Pay Up to $25,000

By Mary Spargo

Asserting that members of Congress are grossly underpaid, President Truman emphatically declared yesterday that legislators should raise their salaries from $10,000 a year to from $15,000 to $25,000 and he would approve the bill.

The President made his views known when he was asked at his press conference about a $2500 "expense allowance" which the House, by a roll call vote of 205 to 152, gave its members yesterday.

The House action, the chief executive said, was a legislative matter and he would not veto the bill, but he indicated that he thought a direct, and a larger, raise would have been preferable.

Favors "Commensurate" Pay

Congress should not be a rich man's club, the President said, and he added that as an employer the United Government should pay enough so that no employe should be working for anyone else.

Asked if there was any implication in that statement that some members of Congress might be working for other than the Government, the President was quick to reply no.

The United States Government, he said, is rich enough to pay its own employees a salary commensurate with what they do.

The President made it clear that in stressing the need for higher congressional salaries he was speaking from his own personal experience as a Senator.

Cites Personal Experience

He said he had to make his wife his secretary when he was in the Senate in order to obtain money needed to meet his bills.

He said she had to be at the office and away from her household duties, and that he did not like it and she did not like it either. She was a valuable secretary, though, he added and her services were important.

Gesturing toward the newsmen gathered in his study, Mr. Truman

House Passes Bretton Woods Bill, 345 to 18

By the Associated Press

By a resounding 345 to 18 vote, the House passed and sent to the Senate yesterday legislation ratifying the Bretton Woods agreements setting up a world bank and monetary stabilization fund.

Applause greeted Speaker Rayburn's announcement of the vote, in which 205 Democrats were joined by 136 Republicans and two minor party members in the overwhelming approval of the measure. All the 18 "no" votes were cast by Republicans.

Secretary Morgenthau immediately hailed the decision, saying the House "has spoken forcefully for the principle of international cooperation."

Chairman Wagner (D., N. Y.) of the Senate Banking Committee said:

"It was a marvelous vote for a marvelous cause. I do not anticipate any trouble in the Senate committee nor on the Senate floor."

Senator Ball (R., Minn.): "I believe there will be quite a fight in the Senate over adoption of the Bretton Woods proposal but I believe the Senate will approve it—

Big 5 Limit Veto Power, Settle Issue

Decision Permits Free Hearings, but Holds Enforcement To Unanimous Vote

By Douglas B. Cornell

San Francisco, June 7 (AP).—Secretary of State Stettinius announced formally today a Big Five agreement "assuring freedom of hearing and discussion" on international disputes in a world security council.

With this agreement, Stettinius told an applauding news conference he believed it would make it possible for the United Nations conference to "proceed with promptness and dispatch."

He expressed his confidence in the successful conclusion of its all-important task in drafting a world peace-keeping charter.

Under the agreement, Stettinius explained in a formal statement, the Big Five will have veto power over "all decisions in the Security Council relating to enforcement action and—except as to parties to disputes—in all decisions for peaceful settlement."

Permits Hearings on Disputes

But the veto, he said, does not apply "to the right of any nation to bring a dispute before the council" for discussion, and "no individual member of the council can alone prevent a consideration and discussion by the council of a dispute or situation thus brought to its attention."

Russia on one side has been insisting that the veto should apply even to discussion of international quarrels in the Security Council. The rest of the Big Five—France, China, Britain and the United States—contended that it should not.

Their differences apparently were composed by direct negotiations involving President Truman and Premier Stalin.

Mr. Truman had a personal envoy, Harry L. Hopkins, consulting with Stalin. Hopkins left Moscow today and Truman announced he expected soon the declaration which Stettinius issued this afternoon.

Way Opened to End Parley

There was talk that the Conference may finish its task of writing the charter for a world organization by June 15.

Stettinius, however would make no forecast so exact. He told his news conference it might require eight days to two weeks.

May Invoke 'Rationing'

Truman Asks Curb on Travel At Home to Speed Pacific War

Emphasizing the enormous transportation job involved in transferring American troops from Europe to the Pacific, President Truman yesterday asked Americans to cooperate by remaining at home.

He made this comment at a press conference in releasing a statement on the travel situation. Asked whether he thought the Government would have to control all travel through some rationing system, he replied that he hoped the the step would be unnecessary, but was prepared to take it, if it is required.

Text of Statement

President Truman's statement follows:

"All too few realize the transportation difficulties which are now developing and which will continue well into 1946. It is important that the public understand the situation and at once lend full cooperation in order that the burden may be minimized.

"The transportation performance in mobilizing our victorious armies in Europe over a period of four long, difficult years required the utmost effort. The plan of battle now requires that our armies be transferred to the far Pacific in the very short time of 10 months. We must now complete in 10 months a task that is only one third less than the previous job which required nearly 48 months. The transportation job in the first phase of the war has often been called a "miracle." The job ahead of us is even bigger.

"The facilities for civilian passenger transportation will be greatly reduced. In order to obtain passenger equipment for troop movements, it will probably be necessary to reduce the capacity of sleeping car equipment on regular trains by 50 per cent. Men in uniform, other than on troop movements, now comprise about one third of the passengers on a regular train. If the number of these travelers in uniform remained constant, a 50 per cent reduction in sleeping car capacity on regular trains would mean that only one out of four of the civilians now using this equipment could do so

Big 5 Mideast ParleyOpposed By President

Announcing that he expects to meet Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin within the next 40 days, President Truman yesterday made it clear he was opposed to a meeting of the big powers to settle difficulties in the Middle East.

He spoke at a press conference shortly after French Ambassador Henri Bonnett formally presented Acting Secretary of State Joseph C. Grew a note from the French government proposing a five-power meeting to discuss both French and British problems in the Middle East and the whole question of security in the area. Churchill has also rejected a "Big Five" meeting on the Syrian crisis, and has proposed a conference of Britain, France and the United States.

The Bonnet note did not refer specifically to a meeting of the heads of the governments of the United States, Great Britain, China, France and Russia, but Truman indicated that he did not consider either a meeting of government chiefs or of representatives necessary to solve middle eastern difficulties growing out of French-Arab clashes in Syria and Lebanon.

The question of meetings on the Arab troubles has become entangled in big-power differences on the subject. Britain objected to inclusion of China and Russia. Russia proposed a meeting to consider the Arab-French troubles. The French proposal covered the entire area, British as well as French interests. China has not been heard from.

The meeting contemplated, he said, is a meeting of the big three which will discuss world affairs.

It was assumed that Truman believed difficulties in the Middle East could be discussed without a full-dress conference by use of more normal diplomatic channels.

Sub Shells Jap Position

San Francisco, June 7 (AP).—Allied submarine yesterday shelled Japanese positions on Miyako Jima, about 180 miles southwest of Okinawa in the Sakishima group, radio Tokyo reported today in a broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

Tokyo Admits End in Sight On Okinawa

Guam (Friday), June 8 (AP).—American forces on Okinawa rushed the rebuilding of newly won Naha airfield and put Naha Harbor to use today as Tokyo's press and radio acknowledged that the "final end" of the Okinawa battle was in sight.

The Sixth Marine Division, which seized the airfield, drove on southeastward toward a junction with the First Marine Division, aimed at finally cutting off the Oroku Peninsula overlooking the anchorage and thus stopping the Japanese shellfire which still could reach both field and harbor.

Remnants of the Japanese garrison there were resisting fiercely, despite loss of many of their best 6- and 8-inch artillery pieces.

Hill Positions Under Attack

Others of the defense force, now estimated to number no more than 15,000 fighting men, had been driven into last-stand positions on the Yaeju-Dake escarpment, a series of ridges and hills running east and west across the southern tip of Okinawa.

The Seventh and Ninety-sixth Infantry Divisions were hammering at the eastern and central sections of the escarpment, which is as much as 450 feet high in places, while the First and Sixth Marines were getting into position to assault the western section.

The all too familiar heavy rain and deep mud continued to hamper operations, so that supplies had to be sent forward by hand, by parachute and by amphibious vessels.

The tenor of American communiques and field dispatches agreed, however, that the ultimate conquest of Okinawa could not be far away.

Oroku Most Urgent Task

Brig. Gen. William T. Clement, assistant commander of the Sixth Marine Division, said the cleanup of the Oroku Peninsula was the Americans' most important task, and other officers agreed that final clearing of the southern tip of the island could be done more or less at leisure while the American base facilities were being built.

Jury Returns Mandatory Death Verdict In 3 Hours

Robbery Charge Against Convict In Mrs. Boyer's Slaying Also Upheld

By Winifred Nelson

Joseph D. Medley was found guilty yesterday of murder during the perpetration of a robbery and of robbery itself in the Nancy Boyer slaying case.

The first offense carries a mandatory death sentence.

The District Court jury of nine men and three women returned a verdict at 5:10 p. m. after deliberating less than three hours.

Just before entering the jury room, Chief Prosecutor John W. Fihelly shakes an accusing finger at the 44-year-old Medley and heard him quote from the Bible in an impassioned voice:

"By their fruits ye shall know them."

First Degree Count Ignored

Medley stood ramrod-straight before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough as the jury filed back to the courtroom with its decision.

"Have the jurors agreed upon a verdict?" asked Court Clerk Marlon Lewis.

"We have," replied the foreman.

The routine questioning revealed that the panel found a verdict of guilty on the first and third count of the triple-count indictment. The second count, that of first degree murder, was ignored.

Medley's Jew Is Set

Medley's face was not visible to courtroom spectators during this minute-long drama, but afterwards, when deputy marshals escorted him back to the cellblock, his ample jaw was set in a steely line.

The oft-described eyes looked straight ahead as he was marched through corridors lined on each side with a crowd of parade-ground proportions.

In yesterday's eighth day of the trial, Defense Attorney Denny Hughes made closing arguments and Prosecutor Fihelly, rebuttal statements.

Defense Claims Hit

Fihelly snorted at defense claims that Mrs. Boyer, a divorcee, was killed by a woman because of the evidence of fingernail or other scratch-marks on her neck, and asserted:

"Now this really is a surprise. It almost floored me and I'll tell you why. If she was killed by a woman and jealousy was the motive, how did Medley get her fur jacket?"

Medley, an escapee from Michigan State Prison, did not explain his possession of a silver fox chubby identified as Mrs. Boyer's when he was arrested March 18 in St. Louis.

Lulled Her, Fihelly Charges

He was accused of returning to the women's 16th st. apartment after the other guests of an all-night poker party March 5 had departed, on the pretense of taking her to breakfast.

"He lulled her into a sense of false security, then robbed her and

Norwegian King Returns Home

Oslo, June 7 (U.P.).—King Haakon, the 72-year-old man who rallied 3,000,000 Norwegians to "faith in victory" during five years of German occupation, returned home today.

The tall, slender monarch—thinner but smiling—stepped from the royal barge onto a flag-draped pier at noon as harbor boats blew their whistles and hundreds of thousands of people chanted "Long live the King" in a mighty roar that echoed and re-echoed through Oslo Fjord. Star shells burst in the sky.

Swathed in Medals, Pistols, Patton Hailed in New England

Boston, June 7 (U.P.).—Gen. George S. Patton, jr., his tunic virtually hidden by medals and ribbons and two black-handled pistols strapped to his hips, drove 15 miles through jammed New England villages today—a smiling, happy hero back from the wars.

Accompanied by 45 other officers and men of the conquering U. S. Third Army, he landed at the Bedford Army Air Base after a trans-Atlantic flight and then made a triumphal entry into Boston.

Three C-54 Skymasters of the Air Transport Command brought the Patton party from the European theater.

Wearing his four-starred battle helmet, and carrying a riding crop, Patton stepped jauntily from his plane and smartly saluted Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles of the First Service Command. Then he shook hands with Gov. Maurice J. Tobin of Massachusetts.

Mrs. Patton and the general's children were in the reviewing stand, perhaps 20 yards distant. Mrs. Patton, pushing aside several cameramen, ran with outstretched arms to meet her hero husband.

"Hello," she said, throwing her arms around his neck and kissing him on the cheek.

The general's son, George 3d, a West Point cadet, cried, "Hi'ya, Pop?" Then the pair embraced.

Next, Patton kised his daughters, Mrs. Ruth Patton Totten and Mrs. Beatrice Patton Waters.

Mrs. Patton pointed to the five rows of battle ribbons on the general's chest, and said, "Look at that patchwork."

The general said, "It cost me 12 bucks." The group laughed.

Dancing Teacher, Wed 15 Times, Quits Divorce Suit

Richmond, Va., June 7 (AP).—A Richmond dancing teacher who has been married 15 times and who several weeks ago brought suit for divorce against her husband, a dental technician, because, as she alleged in her complaint, he had developed an "unpleasant custom" of taking off one of his two artificial legs and beating her with it, asked, and was granted permission, to withdraw her suit.

The complainant is Mrs. Pauline Conlon. In her petition for a dismissal of the suit she said her husband has left the State for "parts unknown." The request was granted by Judge Brockenbrough Lamb of Richmond Chancery Court.

Yank Mistaken for German Put in Nazi Prisoner Camp

Framingham, Mass., June 7 (U.P.).—An American corporal was captured by U. S. troops and spent a month in a German prisoner of war camp in England before fingerprint records established his identity, it was disclosed today.

Corpl. Gilbert J. Beamesderfer of Ephrata, Pa., a patient at Cushing General Hospital here, was wounded and rendered unconscious in France last fall when his squad was trying to destroy a Nazi machine-gun nest. When he regained consciousness, he found himself in a hospital, the same hospital to which droves of wounded Nazi prisoners had been taken.

"Wherever did you learn to speak such good English?" a nurse gasped when he asked when he would be operated upon.

A doctor came in, addressed him in German, in which language the corporal replied. Hours later he awoke in the midst of a group of Germans. An American lieutenant passed.

"What happened? Have we been captured?" Beamesderfer shouted.

"Be quiet," the lieutenant answered. "You're OK. You're with your buddies."

"Buddies, hell!" Beamesderfer cried. "Get me out of here. I'm an American."

He was sent to a prisoner of war camp in England, where he found a nurse who listened to his detailed account of his Pennsylvanian life. Finally, authorities cabled Washington for his fingerprints. After 30 days of imprisonment, an officer burst into the corporal's tent and announced:

"I am happy to inform you that you're an American at last."

Stilwell Sees MacArthur At Manila

Manila, June 7 (U.P.).—Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, commander in chief of all United States Army Graund Forces, has visited Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his staff, it was announced today.

No statement was made of the purposes or results of the visit of Stilwell, the "Vinegar Joe" who as United States commander in chief in the China-Burma-India theater was formerly chief of staff to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

But the importance of the conference was obvious from the fact that in his new post at Washington Stilwell is chief of all the millions of Army Ground Troops now being redeployed to the Pacific.

Town Captured as Good Gains Made By 37th Division

Manila (Friday), June 8 (AP).—Troops of the Thirty-seventh Ohio Division, thrusting rapidly northward through the gorge leading to the Cagayan valley of northern Luzon, captured the town of Bambang and advanced 3 miles besond it, within 4½ miles of the key road junction of Bayombang, General MacArthur disclosed today.

In central Luzon, the Japanese were cleared from defended positions in the rugged mountains east of Manila, MacArthur's communique said.

Both operations were supported by planes which dropped 200 tons of bombs on the enemy.

On the southern Philippine Island of Mindanao the relentless cleanup of the Japanese continued, MacArthur announcing further attrition of enemy personnel and supplies with limited gains against stiffening resistance.

Besides close air support of the ground operations on both islands despite bad weather, MacArthur announced widespread bomber operations against Formosa, Borneo, Rabaul and the Indo-China coast.

Heavy bombers hit several targets in Formosa, including Taito, on the east coast, where numerous fires were set. The Taito airdrome was strafed by fighters.

Heavy, medium and fighter bombers caused "widespread damage" to enemy bases on Borneo, hit air strips and storage buildings and sank two freighters at Bandjermasin.

450 Superforts Scatter Raging Fires in Osaka

Guam, June 7 (AP).—High explosive bombs dropped by American Superfortresses along with some 3000 tons of gasoline jelly incendiaries scattered raging fires through the arsenal and munitions making area of Osaka today.

Not a single Japanese plane challenged the B-29s. It was the second raid in a week by 450 B-29s from the Marianas on Japan's number one industrial city.

Firemen Driven Away

The terrific effect of the combined high explosive and incendiary attack was indicated in Japanese reports.

Fire fighters were driven to underground shelters by the explosives, Tokyo radio said, and then the incendiaries turned the target area into an inferno.

The high explosives were aimed particularly a tthe steel and cement Osaka arsenal, one of the largest in Japan.

No Japanese Opposition

A Japanese radio dispatch said about 40 American fighter planes, led by two B-29s, scattered propaganda leaflets around the City of Kogashima.

No Japanese opposition of any sort was observed over Osaka. Fliers said the sky above the overcast was empty of Japanese interceptors, antiaircraft shells and fire balloons.

Osaka previously was attacked by mass fleets of B-29s with incendiary bombs March 14 and June 1. Reconnaissance photographs disclosed these attacks had lain waste 11.5 square miles of the city.

Tokyo broadcasts and a Japanese joint Army-Navy communique on the raid failed—a marked departure from previous after-raid announcements—to claim any B-29s shot down.

Fenwick to Open Campaign Office

Richmond, Va., June 7 (AP).—State campaign headquarters for Lieut. Col. Charles R. Fenwick of Arlington, a candidate for the Democratic nomination as Lieutenant Governor of Virginia subject to the August 7 primary, will be opened here tomorrow with Willis E. Cohoon of Suffolk, a member of the House of Delegates, serving as campaign manager.

Colonel Fenwick, a member of the House of Delegates from Arlington, announced last night at Roanoke, where he was attending a meeting of the Legislative Commission appointed to study rural health and medical facilities in the State, and of which he is chairman, that he had been placed on inactive duty by the Army and will take an active part in the campaign between now and the primary date. Colonel Fenwick has served 26 months as a member of the royalty adjustment board of the Army Air Forces, with headquarters at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio.

H said he had been granted a 44-day leave to conduct his campaign and that, if elected, he will be discharged from the service in order that he may take office in January.

Big Whisky Black Market Revealed; Tax Action Looms

Secretary Morgenthau said yesterday the Treasury Department has uncovered a black market in whisky that was developed from a $100 investment into a million-dollar business.

The Treasury Secretary said the information had been turned over to the Department of Justice preliminary to bringing a $200,000 tax evasion action against the operators.

Morgenthua told a news conference that three persons with total cash resources of only $100 learned that a large supply of whisky was owned by a drug store chain operating in Chicago and Indianapolis; that they went out among potential whisky buyers, solicited orders and obtained advance payment for future delivery.

The secretary said the three thus accumulated $400,000, with which they bought the drug company's whisky-owning subsidiary. They they delivered the whisky to their original customers and to others, he said.

But, in making heir income tax returns, Morgenthau asserted, they filed on the basis of ceiling price sales instead of the price they obtained.

Trio of Linemen On Okinawa Show They Can Kill Japs

Okinawa, June 7 (INS).—A trio of Signal Corps linemen proved today that doughboys and Marines aren't the only ones who can kill Japs.

Eurie Legates of Clay, Ky., was stringing wire with Sergt. Denzil Stores of Hartford City, Ind., and Pfc. William Salter of Troy, Kans.

Only Stores of the trio was armed. He carried a .38 revolver.

Salter, wearing leg irons, was about to climb a tree to string the telephone wire when he stumbled across the Jap sleeping in the bushes at the tree's base.

Salter and the Jap were both startled and fled in opposite directions.

The Jap dashed across country, past Stores, who managed to pull out his revolver and plug the Nip in the leg with a long shot. The Jap, sagged, ran a few paces more and fell in front of Legates.

Legates, wasting no time, jumped on the Jap and beat him to death with a pair of wire cutters.

The Jap was found to be armed with six grenades and a bayonet.

Chinese Threaten Major Port; Jap Land Corridor Reduced

Chungking, June 7 (AP).—Chinese troops, sweeping the Japanese out of strategic Fukien Province, 450 miles west of Okinawa, launched a series of attacks today on enemy units holed up in Futing, a highway town covering the southern approaches to the major Chekiang port of Wenchow.

Asecond Chinese force, 640 miles to the southwest in Kwangsi Province, captured Mengshan, Chinese authorities announced. These victorious troops were 75 miles beyond the American airbase city of Liuchow, which also is reported to be in Chinese hands. The southern portion of the ruptured Japanese land corridor through China now has been reduced to a width of from 100 to 250 miles.

With the end of the American battle for Okinawa now in sight, Chinese at Futing's outskirts have held open a 105-mile stretch of the Fukien coast aboe liberated Feochow and are less than 10 miles from the Chekiang Province border. That freed coast constitutes a potential American inavsion area.

Once the Japanese are pushed across the Chekiang border the only Japanese pocket in the whole of Fukien Province would be the port of Amoy, 300 miles northeast of Hongkong.

It was believed the Japanese would continue their northward withdrawal up the coast and might abandon Wenchow, a former treaty port 220 miles south of Shanghai.

Indications were that the Chinese were not trying to obstruct the Japanese withdrawal but were following close upon it, delivering occasional prods.

The Chinese high command reported that fighting still was raging west of the Japanese bastion of Hsihsiakow in Honan Province, 400 miles northeast of Chungking.

In wide sweeps yesterday and Tuesday, ranging all the way from Peiping in the north to the coastal railroad of French Indo-China, American planes hit railroad installations and rolling stock, bridges, river shipping and truck convoys, a communique said.

Circus Men Surrender To Serve Jail Terms

Hartford, Conn., June 7 (AP).—George J. Smith, general manager, and Leonard J. Aylesworth, boss canvassman of the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey combined shows reported here today to start serving sentences of not less than one year, not more than two years, imposed in connection with the circus fire which took 168 lives here last July 6.

James A. Haley, vice president of the show, started serving from one to five years on April 7. Edward R. Versteeg, chief electrician, and William Caley, chief seatman are serving sentences of one year in the county jail.

said that some of the press hadn't liked it either, and had tried to make a political issue of it.

With a smile, he added that apparently the people had liked it.

Even before the President spoke, a move was under discussion among several Senators to introduce a pay directly and sharply upping the pay of members.

Rejected By Senate

The Senate earlier had rejected for itself the $2500 "expense allowance," which some maintain is tax free, mainly on the ground that it was an indirect pay raise.

Senators who had seen the $2500 go glimmering out of their sight said before the press conference was held that a move to raise salaries would probably not be made until the smoke of the Senate-House battle over the "expense allowance" had blown away.

The strong backing expressed by the President yesterday, however, may prompt speedier action.

Opposing the expense allowance yesterday, on the floor of the House, Representative Malcolm C. Tarver (D., Ga.) said he hoped the President would veto the measure, but Administration leaders voted for it and were confident at that time that the President would not block the bill.

King Honors 29 in Parliament For Public Service

London, June 7 (U.P.).—Four veteran Labor Party members of Parliament were among 29 men honored by King George last night for political and public services in a special honors list incident to the dissolution of Parliament in preparation for a general election.

Lord Addison was elevated from baron to viscount. Will Thorne, 87, Labor member of Commons for 39 years, was made a member of the King's privy council. Maj. Clement Attlee, Labor Party leader in Commons, and Arthur Greenwood, a Labor leader colleague, were made Companions of Honor.

George Lambert, Conservative, was made a viscount and thus enters the House of Lords. H. H. Balfour and Sir E. W. M. Grigg, ministers resident in West Africa and the Middle East, respectively, were made barons. Lord Croft and Sir Geoffrey Shakespeare were made privy councilors.

Ben Smith, minister resident in Washington for supply, was made a knight commander of the Order of the British Empire.

Drinks on Him

Laramie, Wyo. (U.P.).—Next time a certain Laramie railroad man goes shopping, he'll make certain of the identity of his car before putting anything in it. He purchased a fifth of spirits on a recent shopping tour, returned and placed it in a parked car, and went to complete his purchases. When he returned the fifth was gone. He had placed it in the wrong car, which wasn't there any more.

Professor Helps Out

Amherst, Mass. (U.P.).—Prof. W. H. Tague of Massachusetts State College decided recently to do something about the hundreds of sewing machines which housewives couldn't get repaired because of the shortage of repairmen. So he set up an all-day sewing machine clinic at Town Hall. The women brought their machines to the hall where they repaired them themselves under Prof. Tague's watchful eye.

Bradley Slips Into City With Little Fanfare

With as little fuss as possible the soft-spoken four-star Gen Omar N. Bradley, commander of the victorious Twelfth Army Group in Europe, and newly named chief of the Veterans' Administration, slipped into Washington from New York yesterday with his wife, Mary Elizabeth.

Stepping off the train at Union Station at 3:30 the general took such long, swift strides to the waiting car that one bystander remarked:

"Now I know why we got into Germany in such a rush!"

Bradley in a Hurry

On the same train with the Bradleys were Gen. Clarence Huebner, commander of the Fifth Army Corps, and his wife. General Huebner had arrived in town Tuesday but had taken a "brief jaunt back to the big city."

General Bradley was in a hurry. He had to rush over to the Pentagon, he explained. No, he wouldn't tell just what he was going to do there, though news of his new appointment followed his Washington arrival by one hour.

All the reticent, quiet-mannered leader would say was that "it's very good to be home after 20 months."

Mrs. Bradley Happy

Mrs. Bradley, however, was the exuberant and excited one.

"There just are no words to express my feelings at having him home again. Just to see his plane come into New York Sunday—those were the happiest moments of all."

She added that both she and her husband have been "busy seeing the shows." They attended "Marinka" at the National last night.

The Bradleys leave Washington tomorrow for their hometown of Moberly, Mo.

embroiled in scandal, has been accused of being more concerned with "dollar honesty" than with the broad human problems involving the restoration to civilian life of the millions of this war. The agency also has been charged with failure to provide adequate medical care and psychiatric treatment for disabled veterans.

Hints New Hines Post

Truman, in his letter to Hines accepting the resignation, declared:

"I want you to know that I have always had and shall continue to have complete confidence in you and in your handling of public matters. In fact, I shall ask you within the near future to take another post of public importance, and I hope that you will accept it."

Bradley's appointment will become effective upon confirmation by the Senate, and after he has wound up his War Department affairs in 30 to 60 days, Truman said. Bradley will serve in the VA job on loan from the Army, retaining his active status, Truman said.

New Meat Rations To Test Ingenuity Of Restaurateurs

Ingenuity of Washington's restaurant operators is expected to rise to the challenge of the city's most serious shortage of meat when new eating place rationing goes into effect July 1, Robert J. Wilson, Executive Secretary of the Washington Restaurant Association, said last night.

The 20 per cent cut in meat rations, announced last night by price officials, will find local restaurant men and butchers prepared to "take it on the chin," it was indicated by spokesmen for these groups.

Wilson said he thought it would be necessary for restauranteurs here to serve daily two million meals by making up new dishes from available red ration points. He added that while the new regulations will mean stretching allotments of meat points by about 25 per cent, a temporary shortage of some foods "at this point," is part of the cost of winning a major war.

Baby Talk Helps Brazilian Fighters

Rio De Janeiro (AP).—In addition to its campaign to get mail, cigarettes, socks, candy and similar items to Brazilian soldiers overseas, the Brazilian legion of assistance has set up a daily radio program beamed toward Italy carrying messages for the "expeditionaries."

Once a week the legion holds a special "Good Night, Daddy" (Boa Noite, Papa!) hour where the children of soldiers can speak directly to their fathers on the field of battle. Another night each week mothers, wives, sweethearts and sisters speak. The remaining periods are dedicated to reading messages for the soldiers.

Aussies Deny JapReport Of Gen. Darrick's Death

San Francisco, June 7 (AP).—Melbourne radio today denied a Japanese claim that the "surface commander" of Australian forces on Tarakan Island, identified by Melbourne as Lieut. Gen. Darrick, had been killed in action. Melbourne said Tokyo had probably misinterpreted a recent Australian broadcast reporting the death in action on Tarakan, May 23 of Lieut. Thomas Derrick, V. C.

British King, Queen Visit Channel Islands

London, June 7 (U.P.).—King George and Queen Elizabeth visited the Channel Islands of Jersey and Guernsey today for the first time since the islands were liberated from German occupation.

The royal couple arrived at St. Helier, Jersey, at 11 a. m., in the cruiser Jamaica, escorted by four destroyers. After touring the island the King and Queen left by air for Guernsey.

Nan B. Jervey

Nan Barney Jervey, 5, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Jervey, 5111 Watson st. nw., died yesterday in Children's Hospital.

Services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at St. Davids Chapel, 5100 McComb st. nw. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mr. Jervey is civilian small arms chief of the Ordnance Department and a veteran of World War I.

Japs Reveal How To Escape Bombs From U. S. Planes

San Francisco, June 7 (AP).—Radio Tokyo complained today of a "new tactic" being used by Superfortresses which today raided Osaka.

"First," said Tokyo, discussing the Yokahama raid last week, "a formation of 10 B-29s flew over the city and dumped explosive bombs, thereby chasing our civilian air defensive units to air raid shelters. Then, after that, the enemy dropped incendiary bombs, thereby blowing up the initial fire-prevention activities."

The broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, suggested the defense units could cut damage and speed their work by noting the time of descent and distance of dispersion of bombs. It takes 45 seconds for a bomb to fall from 10,000 meters, the broadcast said, adding:

"Thus you can run quite a distance in the opposite direction after sighting the explosives."

sponsibility to see that our behavior during this unsettled period will direct the world's thought toward a firmer enforcement of the laws of international conduct, so as to make war less attractive to those who have governments and the destinies of the peoples in their power."

The justice, just back from Europe where he supervised preliminary organization of the prosecution system, disclosed that France had accepted the American proposals only in principle, and that Russia was not yet committed. However, he added that he had no reason to doubt that Russia will unite in the prosecution.

Sure of Cooperation

President Truman also declare he was certain the French and Russians would cooperate. There are no important differences with the British.

But this country will go ahead with the trials even if it has to act alone, Jackson said, because it is our "inescapable responsibility." Truman confirmed this as our policy.

At this request, Jackson explained, the Army is keeping war crime suspects in close confinement and under stern control. They are denied "the privileges which would appertain to their rank if they were merely prisoners of war."

Two blanket systems of accusations are to be the basis of the American system:

1. A "large number" of individuals will be brought to trial, specifically those in authority in the government, in the military establishment, in the financial, industrial and economic life, "who by all civilized standards are provable to be common criminals."

2. Several voluntary fanatical and violent organizations, such as Gestapo and the SS, will be prosecuted, with the purpose of establishing their criminal character.

Trial of Organizations

In the trials of the organizations, important representative members will be allowed to defend the associations as well as themselves. If an organization is convicted, its individual members not already tried in the original case will be called on to defend themselves.

For the latter individuals—presumably many thousands—there will be only personal defense, or extenuating circumstances. One defense given as an example is duress at the time of joining. Contrary to ordinary criminal law, the burden of proof will rest with the defense in such cases.

Lady Astor Cited As 'Old Gas Bag' In Parliament

London, June 7 (AP).—Aneurin Bevan, the former butcher boy and Welch coal miner who became a Laborite member of Parliament, called Lady Astor "an old gas bag" in Commons today.

"Oh, dear," replied the noble lady from Virginia and Plymouth.

Bevan was protesting that Parliament had not sanctioned subsidies to encourage house building when Lady Astor made an audible comment.

"Shut up," went up the cry from the Labor benches.

Lady Astor, 65, and a staunch Conservative, jumped to her feet and appealed to the presiding officer:

"Why does Mr. Bevan expect complete silence when he repeats himself a hundred times?"

Bevan retorted:

"It really is intolerable when this old gas bag gets up and gabbles away."

Rain Forecast, Mercury Rise Hailed in Area

By the Associated Press

Gardeners, farmers and Virginians in general welcomed spring back to Virginia yesterday after almost a week of cold weather which retarded crops and broke previous June records.

Warmer weather as well as spring showers were expected as the cool wave wore itself out over the State.

The three successive days of record-breaking lows in weather readings failed to bring much actual damage to vegetation, however, aside frow slowing growth of various crops. The Virginia Department of Agriculture said yesterday that only in scattered areas where frost occurred was any real damage done and that, in general, the cool weather had served only to further delay growth of corn, soybeans, peanuts and other truck crops.

Record Lows Set

June 5, 6 and 7 were record-breaking weather days in many parts of the State.

Richmond had its third consecutive day Wednesday of record-setting cold for June, with the mercury at 50, 2 degrees under the all-time previous low of 52 for May 7. Wednesday's low was 45 and Tuesday's 48, both lower than any preceding readings of the same dates.

Winchester reported that rising temperatures there brightened the outlook for gardens, and Fredericksburg reported no garden damage, although there was a drop to 46 on Wednesday.

Pulaski Area Suffers

Pulaski appeared to have suffered, with gardens far behind and injury to vegetation from a succession of light frosts experienced until recently. The low in Pulaski for yesterday was 43.2 at 6:30 a. m.

The mercury dropped to 49 in Lynchburg Wednesday, 1 degree above the record low for the date. Danville had a low of 54, and 50 was recorded at the Norfolk Airport Wednesday, compared with 52 on the preceding day. The low in Norfolk proper was 57. Garden and truck was believed adversely affected by dry weather but not so much by cold.

Barr Explains Sale 'Forced'

Annapolis, Md., June 7 (AP).—President Stringfellow Barr of St. John's College declared today that "if the Navy 'requires' the campus of St. John's College it will have to assume full public and moral responsibility for what it does."

The statement was made in a letter to the editor of the Annapolis Evening Capital, and expressed the desire to "let the people of Annapolis know that the responsibility for what may happen to one of their oldest institutions lies wholly with the Navy."

Barr's letter contained the statement of policy adopted by the St. John's board of visitors last April when the board said it would not object to acquisition by condemnation or negotiation provided that the college would be enabled to continue its work elsewhere.

Also attached to the statement was a letter by Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal, dated April 27, informing the chairman of the St. John's board of visitors, Dr. Joseph Parran, "that the expansion of the Naval Academy will require the acquisition of the present property belonging to St. John's College.

It also asked for an investigation of the "acts, conduct and fitness" of L. L. Watts, executive secretary of the commission, declaring that he was "by temperament and training" unfitted for the office he holds, and that he was "dictatorial, unreasonable and arbitrary in handling the peculiar and more or less complicated problems of the blind people of Virginia."

Boys Try to Sell Stolen White Mice To Magistrate

Baltimore, June 7 (AP).—Two small boys told in Police Court today how they and six companions liberated numerous white mice, infected with tropical fevers, from the Johns Hopkins Hospital pathology department, and how they tried to sell some—to the police magistrate himself.

Magistrate Henry B. Mann, to whom the lads tried to make a sale, put two on probation for three months on a larceny charge and the other six were turned over to the Juvenile Court.

The boys said they merely took a hospital elevator to the eighth floor, helped themselves to what white mice they wanted, and turned loose the rest. Nearly all of the boys were bitten, but not seriously, and hospital officials said the victims had nothing to fear but the law.

Fish-Wildlife Service Cites Md. Oyster Bed Care as Model

By Donald Sanders
Associated Press Staff Correspondent

The Maryland plan of financing maintenance of oyster grounds was cited by the Fish and Wildlife Service yesterday as a model for other States.

In a new publication on "Fishery Resources of the United States," first of its kind in half a century, the service advocates wider adoption of the plan being tried in Maryland.

"At present public funds spent on rehabilitating oyster grounds come from general taxation, and money used for planting operations is not recovered," the publication says.

"If oyster fishermen were assessed according to their harvest from the public grounds, the public's initial capital could be recovered and a revolving fund established for maintaining continuous management of the resource without further cost to the taxpayer.

New Approach to Old Problem

"This new approach to the century-old problem of public reef maintenance is now being tried in Maryland with the cooperation of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service. It requires careful planning of all operations, extensive experimentation in the field, accurate cost accounting and objective analysis of the results.

"It is hoped that work along these lines will be fruitful and instrumental in inducing other States to improve the management of their public oyster resources."

The service held out hopes for new postwar markets for oysters, normally harvested at the rate of about 90 million pounds annually—with about 36 million pounds coming from the Chesapeake Bay.

Experience in Preserving

"Prewar experience of some of the canneries in making smoked oyster, oyster spreads and other varieties of specially processed oyster meats points to possibilities of further developments in this direction," the publication says. "Quick freezing of oysters has been attempted on a commercial scale, but further experiment is necessary to adapt the freezing technique to shellfish meat."

Noting that the demand for good oysters always exceeds the supply, the service foresees the possibility of marketing oysters of certified nutritive quality through careful farming and feeding.

"Continuous decline in the productivity of public reefs proves that self-rehabilitation of grounds without active assistance from man is incompatible with intensive commercial exploitation," the publication declares.

Efforts to Check Depletion

"Efforts to combat depletion through the enactment of conservation laws . . . have been fruitless and the annual catch of oysters has declined to about half its former size. . . . Control of the rate of harvesting is necessary for maintaining the level of productivity of public grounds."

The service asserts that oyster planters should receive as much assistance from State and Federal governments as that now given agricultural farmers.

Richmond, Va., June 7 (AP).—First Lieut. Lee A. Archer of New York, leading Negro air ace, who has completed 138 missions flying P-38s, P-39s, P-40s, P-47s and P-51s, all without a scratch, has a word of advice for neophyte pilots:

Take it easy when you drive a car.

The 25-year-old pilot, who returned to the United States uninjured after 14 months overseas with the famed "Red Tail" group, is in Richmond Army Air Base Hospital with a broken leg, a broken finger and cuts and concussions. He got those wounds driving a car from Atlantic City, N. J., to Atlanta, Ga., 21 days after he returned to the States.

OPA Auto Repair Time Limit to Be Effective June 14

Baltimore, June 7 (AP).—J. R. Rodgers, State Office of Price Administration price specialist, said today that specific limits on the time required to make 56 standard types of automobile repairs would go into effect in Maryland next Thursday.

Rodgers said that under the measure, designed to halt the practice of charging for more than the necessary hours of labor, repairmen cannot charge for more than the specified number of hours for repairs ranging from minor brake adjustments to the complicated installation of a crankshaft and bearings.

Each shop will be required to keep a copy of the new regulation for customer inspection and to supply sales slips describing the service given.

New Home for Nurses Urged in Hagerstown

Hagerstown, Md., June 7 (AP).—A new residence for Washington County Hospital nurses, at an estimated cost of $200,00, was urged in the annual report of Hospital Superintendent Charles J. Cotter.

Cotter, who stated that "the need of a new home large enough to accommodate all our students under one roof, is very much needed," also recommended expansion of the school of nursing at an estimated cost of $25,000, erection of a children's wing, and a new maternity building at a cost of $100,000.

Critic of OPA Dropped From Ration Board

Baltimore, June 7 (AP).—The Maryland Office of Price Administration disclosed today that it had dropped Herman L. Mills, president of the Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce, from membership on that town's ration board because he had "publicly expressed an unsympathetic stand and disapproval" of the OPA program.

Mills, who is also president of the Hagerstown Republican Club, was not available for comment.

News stories of Mills' address said he "had included in his talk facts and figures showing enormous quantities of stored food that were spoiling and going to waste."

He wasq uoted as saying that "regulations and procedures of the OPA were among reasons why commercial travelers have hard sledding" and that "bootlegging of food today is worse than bootlegging of liquor was in prohibition days."

The Hagerstown papers' accounts reported further that Mills had said "it is time to get rid of the OPA if we want to get something to eat in this country" and that he urged people to write to their congressmen and senators protesting against many of the methods of OPA.

The OPA office said State Director Leo H. McCormick, who appoints board members, sent the following teletype to Mills on May 14:

"In view of your stand against the OPA as reported by the Hagerstown papers of May 4, with the concurrence of the Hagerstown War Price and Rationing board, I hereby notify you that your services are not longer desirable as a member fo the price paney of that board. . . ."

Pay Raise Bill Fails Per Annum Employes

DIARY NOTES: Per annum employes at the Government Printing Office are not covered in the pay raise bill, but they have been assured by Public Printer A. E. Giegengack that they will get "at least" as much of an increase in basic pay rates as the Congress votes other white-collar employes. They are already paid true time and a half for overtime work. . . . At OPA, Jacob D. Hyman and Aaron Leittes have been appointed assistant general counsels. . . . The Randolph bill that would authorize Federal agencies to set up health units was stopped in the House by Representative Kean of New Jersey. Representative Randolph of West Virginia said it would reduce sick leave from an average of seven days annually to between five and six days which, he said, would be the equivalent of between 20,000 and 30,000 full-time employes. . . . S. A. Andretta is slated to succeed Jack Cannon as administrative assistant to the Attorney General.

KLUTTZ

STORY: Two Wave officers, new to our town and gleaming smartly in their trim summer suits, hailed a cab and asked the driver to take them to The Stables—the restaurant. The driver shrugged and drove them to a riding academy in the neighborhood. They got out and started into the stables, but the driver cut off his engine and remained at the curb . . . "T'se a busy man," he explained, "but I'se just a-going to sit here and wait until I see you two gals in those fancy uniforms get on a hoss."

MORE NOTES: Office of War Information will abolish its foreign language section on July 8. The nine remaining employes here will get dismissal notices tomorrow. This section translates broadcasts intercepted by FCC monitoring stations and furnishes the information to foreign language newspapers in this country . . . Tomorrow is the last day that badges will be needed to enter the Social Security building . . . Until recently, the Selective Service Board at Bethel, Alaska, had an Adolph Hitler on its rolls. Adolph had his name changed to Jonathan Johnson . . . Russell H. Herrell is now the executive officer of the Government Printing Office. A new title but the same duties . . . Personnel officers of the Interior Department are meeting here to lay plans for the reduction of personnel, if the time ever comes, the reemployment of veterans, and other personnel problems.

PAY BILL: It was formally reported yesterday by the full House Civil Service Committee, but it now appears that a fight will be made against it on the House floor. Representative Ed Rees of Kansas, ranking Republican on the committee, will file a minority report against the bill. He prefers the present rate of overtime instead of full time and a half up to $2980 as indorsed by the majority. However, his report may indorse full time and a half if the provision that would increase basic pay rates an average of 15.8 per cent is knocked out and present overtime pay on a 48-hour week is added to the basic salaries of those employes who are put back on a 40-hour week. However, Administration leaders are confident the bill will be passed by the House without drastic changes.

COMPLIMENT: Chairman Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee made a fine statement on the work of war agency officials at the close of appropriation hearings. He said in part: "One thing that stands out to me is that when a man is appointed to take charge of one of these agencies, or to accept one of the key positions, he is automatically divested of that immunity which hedges about the character and standing of any private citizen. He is fair prey, from that time on, to any casual passerby who cares to comment on or criticize with rancor either him or any of his actions. The men appointed to these positions are among the most eminent and successful in their profession and almost invariably their appointments have been received with acclaim by those in a position to pass on the subject. Notwithstanding that fact, automatically, when they take one of these positions they are, from that time on, subject to the innuendo, barbs, stings and criticisms of any passerby who finds a loose stone at hand.

"They are accused of rascality, collusion, and scheming to a point that practically amounts to attempts at subversion of the Government which, if done knowingly and intentionally would subject them to prosecution for treason. Of all the unsung heroes of this war, the men who take these positions rank among the highest. About the only consolation we can offer them is the assurance that when history is written, and when partisanship and all the confusion and dissension attending a great war recedes into the background, it will be realized that they have rendered a service second only to that of the men who have led our forces on the battlefield of the western and Asiatic fronts." Well put.

Matapeake Ferry Traffic Shows Further Gains

Annapolis, Md., June 7 (AP).—Traffic on the Sandy Point-Matapeake Branch of the Chesapeake Bay ferry maintained its steady rate of increase during May as compared to May, 1944, Ferry Manager B. Frank Sherman stated in a report made public today by Governor O'Conor.

An increase of 1990 automobiles was registered, Sherman said, in a total of 18,999 vehicles—a 12 per cent increase. Passenger traffic jumped to 48,864, an increase of 3409 for the past month as compared to May of the preceding year.

The number of trucks using the ferry rose from 3936 in 1944 to 4006 in 1945, Sherman reported.

At the Romancoke-Claiborne branch of the ferry, reopened after a long interval necessitated by the rebuilding of the Claiborne slip, automobile traffic showed a 28 per cent increase with 1001 cars using the service. Passenger traffic showed a 4 per cent gain, while trucks registered a decrease, Sherman declared.

FEPC Fights Losing Battle for Survival

House Rules Group Kills Last Desperate Maneuver to Obtain Necessary Funds

By Robert C. Albright

The Fair Employment Practices Committee yesterday fought a losing legislative battle for survival as the House Rules Committee ruled out a last desperate maneuver to obtain funds for the expiring antidiscrimination agency.

The body-blow to the temporary FEPC followed failure of the third effort in two days to push permanent antidiscrimination legislation through the Rules Committee.

The potent Rules body, which has held up a permanent FEPC bill for three months attributed failure to vote to the absence of one member — Representative Roger C. Slaughter, (D., Mo.). Another meeting was called for Tuesday, when Rules Chairman Adolph J. Sabath, (D., Ill.) insisted a vote will be taken.

The subsequent move to obtain money for the temporary FEPC, which will run out of funds on July 1, followed a statement to the House by Appropriations Chairman Clarence Cannon, (D., Mo.) that his funds committee omitted FEPC from the War agency bill because "the door was locked by the Rules Committee."

"We were given to understand that if FEPC were included, we would get no rule," Cannon told the House.

A group of House FEPC advocates, led by Representative Vito Marcantonio (A. L.) and Mary T. Norton (D., N. J.), promptly went before the Rules Committee to ask waiver of points of order against an amendment from the floor restoring FEPC funds.

Chairman Sabath offered an amendment to the war agencies rule to carry out their request, but was badly outvoted. Instead, the committee approved the "usual" rule asked by Cannon, protecting only the 18 war agencies mentioned in the bill. Neither FEPC or OPA were included.

Sharp Truman Letter

In his sharpest rap at Congress, President Truman on Tuesday in a letter to Sabath pointed out the predicament of the fundless FEPC.

He reminded Congress that the agency may go out of existence without members having a chance to vote as a result of the omission from the War agency bill. He asked the Rules Committee to clear a permanent statute as quickly as possible.

Despite the letter, the Rules group stalled a vote onthe permanent statute for the second straight day. In addition, its failure to provide any method for adding funds for the temporary agency seemed to spell an FEPC fade-out. The Senate will have a chance to appropriate funds before July 1, but there FEPC opponents are even more active than in the House.

Cannon's statement on the floor, laying FEPC's omission from the war agency bill at the door of the Rules committee, followed close examination of the Appropriation chairman by Marcantonio.

Representative Earl C. Michener (R., Mich.), a minority member of the Rules group, challenged Cannon. Michener denied any FEPC ultimatum was given to the Appropriations Committee to his knowledge.

"Come out from behind those false whiskers," Cannon replied.

Mrs. Norton congratulated Cannon for his "courage" in saying the Rules Committee was "trying to run the House." Cannon denied he had made that accusation, but did not retract his earlier charge.

700 U-Boats, Sunk by Allies, Report Reveals

More than 700 German submarines were sunk during the course of the European war, a joint Anglo-American statement disclosed yesterday.

In a final joint monthly report on Atlantic U-boat warfare, President Truman and Prime Minister Churchill said also that many other undersea craft had been destroyed by the Germans themselves in the last stages of the war.

"With the surrender of Germany, the battle of the Atlantic has ended," the report stated. "German U-boats have ceased to operate and are now proceeding under Allied orders."

It added that most of the successes "have been achieved by the combined Allied naval and air forces working in closest cooperation; others are due to mines laid from aircraft and ships; others to bombing in harbors; and a few U-boats were lost by marine dangers."

The report said losses were heavy both in lives and materials, and that "at the peak in 1941 and 1942 the issue of the struggle hung in the balance."

"Germany's object," the report continued, "was to cut the Allied sea communications, upon which the maintenance of Allied war effort depended. This included the movements in supply of armies and air forces during successful campaigns on four continents . . .

"But success was achieved. Thanks to the sailors and airmen, the scientists and technicians, the ship builders and factory workers, the convoys reached their destination and enabled the soldiers and the airmen to fulfill their tasks.

"We, President and Prime Minister, in this our last joint statement on the U-boat war, can now report that the Allies have finished the job."

Principals in Alleged Rape

VICTIM AND ACCUSED—Penelope Baker, 21-year-old New York model (above), yesterday testified at a magistrate's hearing in Philadelphia that Jack Arbruzzo, 26, (lower right), and Peter Bacino, 20, had attacked her Monday night. The men were held without bail for trial on charges of rape, aggravated assault and battery and robbery murdered her in cold blood," the prosecutor said.

"There is testimony, ladies and gentlemen, that he was the only one to reenter that apartment. Mrs. Boyer let him in after looking through the peephole. She must have been expecting someone to return and take her to breakfast. Mr. Medley did return but Mrs. Boyer didn't go to breakfast," recalled Fihelly.

He continued:

"His attorney said that Nancy had no fear of him. He had to wear a mask of hypocrisy and be cordial and polite—a major from the last war, a race-horse owner—and then all of a sudden (waving the death pictures before the jury) there! The mask is off! And you see the courteous gentleman in his real style and form!"

During Medley's visit in Washington from February 25 to March 6, he told the group of seasoned card players whose confidence he won that he had served in the First World War, and owned a string of race-horses.

Fihelly answered the defense attorney's charge that the Police Department had deliberately "pinned the slaying on Medley because there are too many unsolved murders in Washington," by remarking:

"There are times when defense attorneys are desperate that they get off the real issue and try the Police Department and District Attorney's office. We're used to it. We're hardened to it. Don't get off the trail and don't get off the beam," Fihelly urged the jurors.

but by a closer vote than in the House."

The United States is the first of the 44 nations to act on ratification legislation.

The limited House opposition bloc, led by Republican Representative Sumner of Illinois, Smith of Ohio and Buffett of Nebraska, assailed the world monetary plan as "a swindle and a fraud" and as an international WPA. They said "debtor nations" would control the world banking agency.

Details of Operation

As outlined by Treasury Department officials, here is how the Bretton Woods agreements would work:

World bank—

1. Encourage international investment in productive enterprise in war devastated countries and development of natural resources, public utilities and industries in underdeveloped countries. The bank would guarantee loans by private lenders and make some loans out of its own resources.

2. Make long-term currency stabilization loans to countries whose money encounters difficulty.

3. Each member nation would share in the bank risks in proportion to the stock it held.

Works on Gold Basis

Of the $9,100,000,000 bank capital, the United States would subscribe $3,175,000,000. Members would pay in at the start 10 per cent of their subscription, which would mean $317,500,000 for the United States.

Fund—

1. Stabilize currencies of all cooperating nations in terms of gold.

2. Progressively remove barriers against making payments across international boundaries.

3. Provide a revolving fund of foreign exchange for member countries to enable them in times of stress to maintain stable and unrestricted currency relationships.

Of the $8,800,000,000 fund assets the United States would subscribe $2,750,000,000.

To Tax Western Roads

"In addition, war material moving to the Pacific will be more than twice as much as heretofore. This tremendous increase must move over the Western railroads, which are already loaded to capacity.

"Thus the various transportation restrictions will not only be retained but undoubtedly increased. Those asking for relaxation of the restrictions are asking for the impossible.

"The situation requires the cooperation and self-denial of all users of transportation. The speed with which our men and munitions can be carried to within striking distance of Japan will largely determine how long the war must continue. I know that every American wants to add his effort to that of the millions of transportation workers on whom this grave responsibility rests.

Prince Georges Highway Crash Fatal to Youth

Prince Georges County police reported the death of Ferdinand B. Siegmann, jr., 17, of Baltimore, as the result of a head-on collision at 12:45 a. m. yesterday between a light passenger car and a trailer-truck on the overhead bridge at Hyattsville.

Siegmann, an occupant of the car, was killed instantly, police said, while Carl E. Stone, of Anacostia Naval Station, apparently the driver of the car, is in Bethesda Naval Hospital with severe head injuries and had not recovered consciousness at a late hour yesterday.

The driver of the trailer-truck, William Noah Dearth, 16, of Milford, Del., who sustained slight knee injuries and was treated at Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, was charged with manslaughter and driving without insurance. Held on $1500 bond, $1000 for the manslaughter charge and $500 for failure to possess insurance, Dearth was released by Prince Georges County police last night after posting the required amount.

Officer R. A. Pearson said that from the position of the wreckage apparently the car, which was proceeding toward Baltimore, had struck the side of the bridge while rounding the down-grade incline and swerved back into the path of the oncoming truck. The car, borrowed by Stone earlier in the evening, was demolished.

SECURITY

ertheless, that Mr. Truman was counting on addressing the closing conference on June 15.

Removal of the blockade which differences over the veto had imposed in the bpath of the conference will allow a number of committees which have been stalled to get under way once more.

They are the ones concerned with writing charter provisions dealing with voting in the Security Council and efforts of the Council to bring a pacific end to arguments among nations.

Senator Connally (D., Tex.), a member of the American delegation, predicted acceptance by a Conference committee of the Big Five's interpretation oc Council voting procedure.

No Sign at Conference

San Francisco, June 7 (AP).—The United Nations Conference labored over odds and ends on its worksheet today as a Russian bid for another Big Five meeting failed to produce any immediate sign of breaking the impasse over the veto issue.

Conference committees were making a bit of headway here and there.

But on the veto question, which has paralyzed progress on vital sections of a charter for a United Nations League, none of the great powers showed any inclination to bend as their delegation chiefs assembled for the second time in two days.

Before the Big Five leaders assembled in the penthouse of Secretary of State Stettinius, American officials said it looked more and more as if the squabble would end in a shower of statements explaining the opposing stands and in a tempest over the issue on the floor of the Conference.

Course Up to Truman

Some American delegates wanted such a public showdown. But the decision on whether they should force one or make additional efforts to mollify Russia and preserve Big Five unity rested with President Truman.

A scrap in the Conference itself would put Russia on the losing end, since most little powers outside the Soviet sphere have demanded that the veto not only should be inapplicable to discussion of disputes but also to investigation and peaceful settlement of controversies.

One Conference working committee approved unanimously—the Arab states refrained from voting—a proposal that an economic and social council create a commission on women's rights.

This committee also approved the wording of a charter section saying that the United Nations should foster:

"Higher standards of living, full employment, and conditions of economic and social progress and development; solutions of international economic, social, health and other related problems; international cultural and educational cooperation, and universal respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, without distinction as to race, language, religion or sex."

Campaigners Add Extra Effort To Meet D. C. War Loan Goal

Further impetus was given to the local campaign to bolster lagging Series E war bond sales as the 50,000 volunteer bond salesmen yesterday began to "bear down" with added letters, telephone calls and personal contact.

"The salesmen will have to bear down to make the extra sales, but the buyers will have to 'dig down in their jeans' to make the extra purchases if we are to meet our 48 millions 'E' goal by June 30," declared Wilmer J. Waller, local chairman.

In spite of the intensified efforts, however, the District still lags behind the Nation in the percentage of E bonds sold.

Twenty-five million dollars, or 52.1 per cent of the local quota, so far has been subscribed. National sales yesterday hit $2,150,000,000 for 54 per cent of the four-billion-goal.

The District retained its individual bond sales lead over the Nation with $447,700,000, or 68.1 per cent, of the 70-million goal purchased. The Nation has tallied $4,662,000,000 for 67 per cent of its seven-billion goal.

17 Argentine Women Tell Of Repression

By Virginia Prewett

Montevideo, June 7.—Defying a threat of imprisonment, 17 Argentine women leaders representing 48,000 members of the prodemocratic organization, Junta de la Victoria, in paid advertisements yesterday in La Prensa and La Nacion, disclosed full details of the Argentine government's suppression of their activities in aiding victims of Nazism.

Signers of the manifesto included Rosa S. de Martinez Guerrelro, president of the organization; Margot Portela Cantilo de Parker, vice president, both Buenos Aires civic and social leaders; Dr. Margarita Arguas, prominent lawyer; Dr. Cora Ratto de Sadosku, university professor; Maria Portela Cantilo, sculptor; Tulia Peyton, painter; Elvira Ferreirra, writer, and Dr. Telma Reca, leading child psychiatrist in Argentina.

2 Years' Repression Bared

The advertisement tells the organization's story of what it describes as two years of repressive measures and persecution by government authorities.

In an interview on June 1, Albert Teisaire, acting Minister of the Interior, refused 12 members of the junta a guarantee against police threats to jail members of the organization if details of the organization's suppression were disclosed, it was learned.

The junta's manifesto tells how the organization first was formed in 1941 to raise funds to aid victimes of Nazi barbarism, and how it was ordered disbanded on June 28, 1943, as one of the first acts of the military regime.

$75,000 in Supplies Seized

The organization charges that $75,000 worth of supplies, seized by authorities at that time, never were returned.

The ban on the organization was continued until after Argentina's declaration of war against the Axis. On April 7, 1945, the organization was permitted to call a public meeting on the oral promise that the ban was to be lifted.

On April 12, however, a flower sale for the benefit of the United Nations, scheduled for Pan-American Day, April 14, was banned abruptly by authorities.

V-E Day Dinner Blocked

On April 28 official notice was given that the junta could reopen its headquarters, a permission was granted for the organization to sponsor a V-E Day dinner. The day before the scheduled dinner, however, the president of the junta was called to police headquarters where she was told she must sign a paper saying that the dinner had been canceled because of her discovery of an infiltration of "extremists" into the organization, according to the manifesto.

When she refused to sign the paper, she was "delayed" by police for several hours. Subsequently the dinner was called off by an official notice in the press which charged the organization with communistic tendencies.

Leaders immediately visited the Minister of the Interior and demanded to know what charges were made against the organization, and were told there were no specific charges. They were informed, furthermore, that they could continue their work.

Junta Order Ended

On May 28 authorities once more ordered the Junta to halt its activities and close its headquarters, and police warned members that they could face imprisonment if they gave any publicity to the matter.

The final paragraph of the manifesto, the strongest statement against repression that has appeared in Argentina in two years, said:

"To fulfill our obligation as Argentines, and to aid those who have given everything to keep from our people the horrors of Nazi domination, we shall continue fighting to achieve recognition of the legitimate rights of the Junta de la Victoria."

Allies, Reds Stalemated on Vienna Control

London, June 7 (INS).—A Soviet source revealed today a deadlock has developed between the Allies and Russia on the question of dividing Vienna into four control zones.

The Kremlin, according to the informant, insists that the lines of demarcation should end at the Austrian capital's limits as they existed up until 1938. The Americans and British want the joint occupation zones extended to embrace "geater Vienna," according to the Russian source.

Greater Vienna was created by the Nazis after Germany's 1938 annexation of Austria. Joint Anglo-American-Soviet occupation of old Vienna would leave the Russians in possession of the city's major airdromes which lie outside the former city limits.

Joint occupation of Greater Vienna, the Russian source declared, would give the British control of the airfields. The Russian charged this was a "British trick."

He said a similar situation arose in Germany where he charged the Americans were the "chief offenders" because they wanted to discuss control measures in Berlin before U. S. troops would withdraw from Reich areas earmarked for Russian occupation.

"We insisted that the Yanks withdraw first," the Russian source asserted. "Our government is not pleased with the manner in which the American allowed German civilians to flee in front of the Red Army. We hope that when they withdraw they will force the Germans to remain."

Full Yalta Airing Refused By Churchill

London, June 7 (AP).—Laborite demands for a full airing of everything that took place at the Yalta "Big Three" conference last February were turned down by Prime Minister Churchill today, but he declared that there were no secret agreements not since made public.

He indicated, however, that the discussions covered a wider field than had been announced, explaining that the "conversations, of course, proceeded in a very intimate manner, and I am not going to say that everything discussed at Yalta could be made the subject of verbatim report."

Opposition members persisted that Churchill was evading the issue, particularly as to Poland. If there were no secret agreements, he was asked, "why is it that the Russian government has acted in the matter of broadening the Polish government in a way totally at variance with the declared decisions of the conference?"

No. 4 of the nine-point program adopted at Yalta provided for "merging the provisional (Polish) government now recognized by Russia with certain unnamed "democratic leaders from within Poland and from exiled Poles abroad.")

Churchill refused to place himself on record that there should never be secret clauses not reported to the Cabinet.

"It might very often be necessary to do so," he asserted, "and you would hamper very much the whole proceedings if no understandings were made which did not have to be immediately published."

Truman Balks At Easing of Wage Controls

By the Associated Press

President Truman yesterday turned down an urgent request by labor leaders for immediate relaxation of wage controls.

The President told his news conference that the Little Steel wage formula would stand, at least pending a thorough study, to be undertaken later of present wage and commodity price schedules.

Want Quick Revision

Only a short time before, AFL President William Green and CIO President Philip Murray had called at the White House to press for quick revision of the Little Steel formula, by which basic pay raises have been limited to 15 per cent above January, 1941, levels.

They expressed fear of a downward spiral in wartime earnings and employment even before Japan is defeated.

While these appeals were being made at the White House, the WLB was considering the over-all wage policy question.

Announcement in 30 Days

WLB Chairman George W. Taylor disclosed that the board will make an announcement on its reconversion policy within 30 days. He so advised a group of presidents of CIO-United Auto Workers locals at Chrysler Corp. Detroit plants.

Murray and Green both urged Mr. Truman to grant a 20 per cent increase in basic wages to absorb the loss in "take home pay" when war plants shift from the 48 to 40 hour work week.

The Chrysler workers told Taylor that cutbacks already are disturbing Detroit's economy and that Chrysler plants there will be idling or converting to automobile manufacture by the end of September. This will mean unemployment to 75,000 to 100,000 workers, they said.

Ask Hourly Rate Raise

While the shorter work week is advocated all around in order to share employment, the union leaders express fear that unless the hourly rates are increased reduced earnings will be disastrous. Food and other living costs remain swollen, said Frank Danowski of the Chrysler Plymouth local, speaking for the Detroit group.

N. Y. Police to Question Singer On Gifts From Murder Widow

New York, June 7 (AP).—Handsome Reed Lawton, musical comedy barytone, was expected here tonight from Chicago to tell police about large cash gifts he reportedly received from Mrs. Marion Langford, wealthy widow of the mysteriously slain Albert E. Langford.

Lawton's wife confirmed reports that he was en route from the Midwest and that he would submit to questioning in the most baffling murder mystery New York homicide squads have had in years.

Langford, a textile company executive, was shot through the head by one of two strangers who called at their Park Avenue apartment Monday night, seeking to see Mrs. Langford about the late Rafael Diaz, former Metropolitan Opera singer and one of several young artists Mrs. Langford helped financially.

Police said they found Lawton's name among several hundred others in four memorandum books, listing expenses and cash payments made by Mrs. Langford. Some of the gifts ranged as high as $16,500.

"We've got a lot of questions to ask him," detectives said.

Assistant District Attorney Jacob Grumet insisted he had "uncovered lots of clues," but that no definite suspects had been found. Detectives working with Grumet disclosed that Mrs. Langford told them she had given Lawton approximately $56,000 in the last four years. In recent months he has been managing a road company of "Naughty Marietta."

Asked why she had given Lawton the money, Mrs. Langford was quoted by police as replying:

"I can spend my money any way I please."

Mrs. Langford, wealthy in her own right, is heir to a fortune from her 98-year-old father, Joseph Bell Mayer, retired utility financier who formerly lived in Buffalo. He now lives in the same swank apartment house where his daughter resides, but has not been informed of Langford's death. She is 73. Her husband was 63.

Detectives also pressed an investigation in night-life circles after hearing reports that Mrs. Langford played bridge and gin-rummy for big stakes and had been a heavy loser.

An attorney for the family said Mrs. Langford usually kept at least $100,000 in jewelry in her apartment and he had warned her to remove it to a place of safety. He theorized that robbery probably was the motive.

Mrs. Langford, escorted by two detectives, left her apartment late today, saying she was going to visit a physician and her father. Asked whether she would attend funeral services tomorrow for her slain husband, she said:

"Oh, God, no."

Tell us now. Write about your dad, what he does, the swell pal he is, and why you're positive that he's ideal.

Letters are acceptable in any form—long or short, typed, printed or scrawled—just make sure they are legible. Appearance of the entry won't count, it's what you have to say about your dad that may make him the No. 1 Pop on Father's Day, June 17.

Trout Raising Cost Assailed As Excessive

Frostburg, Md., June 7 (AP).—Criticism of the cost of rearing trout and distribution of the game fish was made to the Maryland Game and Inland Fish Commission by Charles A. Stewart, past president of the Allegany-Garrett County Sportsmen's Association at a meeting of the group.

Fred A. Crowe, former mayor of Frostburg and also a former association president, echoed Stewart's disapproval of distribution policies at the session attended by State Game Warden E. Lee Lecompte and four members of the commission.

Crowe detailed a report on trout stocking in the State, and said that more of the fish are stocked in Washington and Frederick Counties than in Garrett, where he claimed the best trout streams in Maryland are located.

The former association president quoted 1944 figures that during the last year approximately 6500 trout were placed in Garrett and Allegany Counties, while 19,000 were stocked in Washington and Frederick Counties.

House GOP Group Proposes Tax Cut Plans Be Drawn Now

Immediate congressional action reducing postwar Federal taxation was proposed yesterday by the House Republican Tax Study Committee, to "spur individual enterprise."

Declaring that "the time for decision in tax matters is now," Chairman Reed (R., N. Y.) of the unofficial study committee proposed:

1. Congressional refusal "to plunge the Federal Government into new and more fields of expenditure and, as the Comptroller General (Lindsay Warren) said, 'courageously apply the pruning knife day after day to present Federal spending.'"

2. Immediate action on "the first steps in tax reduction so that it is a clear disclosure of the official path that will be followed."

"These first steps," Reed said, "should above all be a spur to profit ventures and a timed reduction of taxes on consumers so they may increasingly absorb the products and services of private enterprise."

The Republican group made no specific proposals for tax reductions.

Chairman Doughton (D., N. C.) of the House Ways and Means Committee soon will introduce a bill designed to improve the cash position of business by five billion dollars during the reconversion period by stepping forward the payments on a percentage of excess profits taxes and other refunds due business in the postwar era.

Capitol Hill expects a vigorous battle at that time to amend the Doughton bill with a general downward revision of corporation and individual taxes.

Poles Capture Nazi Chief of Horror Camp

London, June 7 (U.P.).—Paul Hoffman, former chief of the Maidenek horror camp where the Germans allegedly put to death 1,380,000 persons of nearly all the Allied nationalities, has been arrested by Polish authorities, Moscow reports said today.

A Tass News Agency Warsaw dispatch said that Hoffman, long the object of intensive search by the Poles, had been taken into custody. The Maidenek camp was located near Lublin.

Gestapo Chief Taken

Reports from elsewhere in Europe told of executions or arrests of former Axis officials wanted for war crimes.

The British Second Army has taken Gen. Gunther Hancke, chief of the German Gestapo in Denmark, it was reported.

Dispatches from Lueneburg also said that William Joyce, or "Lord Haw-Haw," the traitorous English radio broadcaster, apparently has recovered sufficiently from a leg wound, received when he was captured, to be moved from the German city to Brussels. He will remain there until the charges to be lodged against him in England are decided.

Executed for Treason

(Six former Croat Fascist government leaders, including Premier Nikola Mandic and former Affairs Minister Dr. Mila Budak, have been executed after conviction of high treason and war crimes by a Zagreb court-martial, the Yugoslav telegraph agency Tanyug said.)

Aneta, Netherlands news agency, said that Dirk J. de Geer, Netherlands premier at the time the Germans invaded Holland, may be prosecuted as a collaborationist. De Geer fled to England with his cabinet in May, 1940. Four months later he resigned as premier and went to Lisbon to accompany a government mission to the Netherlands Indies.

From there, after several months wait which he said was due to ill health, he went to Holland in a German plane.

Rome, June 7 (U.P.).—Axis Sally, whose dulcet voice mouthing enemy propaganda made her the best known female of the Mediterranean theater to thousands of GIs, is not a glamorous pin-up girl. She is five fet four and crosseyed.

Sally—she was born Rita Louisa Zubba at 118 West 49th st., New York City—was arrested in Turin Tuesday night.

Allied officials have declared that if caught she would be shipped to the United States for the first treason trial of an American woman since the Civil War.

Arrested with the 33-year-old propagandist was her six-months-old baby son. Authorities made no mention of a husband. She arrived in Italy when she was 16 to study opera and last returned to the States in 1939 to visit her parents.

Arab States Unite in War—Against Locusts

Jerusalem, June 7 (AP).—Middle East nations have united in a battle against a plague of locusts threatening to destroy crops, including one swarm 135 miles long which flew into Saudi Arabia.

Modern antilocust war, an example of international cooperation, has ended the battle against the insects in Saudi Arabia, but the struggle still is under way in Egypt, Iraq, Syria, Transjordan and Palestine.

Antilocust steps were drawn up by Cairo conferences of Middle East authorities, directed by the antilocust bureau in London, headed by the Russian experts, Professor Uvarov.

In the Transjordan, soldiers of the Arab legion spread a poisoned bait mixture of bran and arsenic. In Palestine, unlike Saudia Arabia, the locusts split up into many groups and are now hovering over Galilee and the upper Jordan Valley. Many fields and gardens already have been destroyed.

Duke of Alba Quits as Envoy

London, June 7 (U.P.).—The Duke of Alba, Spanish Ambassador to Britain for the last six years, announced his resignation today and it was expected that he would remain in Britain to work for the restoration of a monarchy in Spain under Don Juan, pretender to the throne.

"The Duke of Alba, having resigned from his post as Spanish Ambassador to the Court of St. James, has returned to this country," an embassy announcement said. "He will probably remain in England for some time."

The resignation had not been announced in Madrid.

The immensely wealthy duke expected to take up his residence at his country estate, Alburg Park, in Surrey.

It was believed he would probably serve as unoffirial agent for Don Juan, now in exile in Switzerland.

Alba's resignation had been forecast since March when Don Juan issued a manifesto calling on monarchists to stop supporting Franco or "share responsibility for his prolongation."

The duke is a leading monarchist and he is regarded as having supported Franco in the belief that Franco would restore the monarchy.

Scientific tests reveal the truth about clean-looking DRAINBOARDS!

Scientists, authorities on health, know that clean-looking drainboards and other kitchen and bathroom surfaces are not necessarily sanitary. They know that infection dangers often exist on such surfaces.

Laboratory examinations of specimens taken from clean-looking surfaces reveal, with the aid of the microscope, the presence of dangerous germs, proving the need for greater home sanitation.

IT CERTAINLY SEEMS SENSIBLE TO MAKE DRAINBOARDS AND OTHER "DANGER ZONES"... SANITARY... CLOROX-CLEAN!

'Enchanted Cottage' Reveals Love Story Of Charm at Keith's

IN ITS EVERY ASPECT, "The Enchanted Cottage," which yesterday opened its first Washington engagement on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater, is a distinguished picture.

It is distinguished in origin, as well as in the quality of its present adaptation, acting and direction.

Herbert Marshall

Presented first as a successful play from the prolific pen of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, it was adapted to the current uses of the RKO-Radio cameras by Dewitt Bodeen and Herman J. Mankiewicz and enlists the high talents of Robert Young, Dorothy McGuire and Herbert Marshall as the costars of an able cast under the direction of John Cromwell.

In its revised form, the story, which was filmed once before as long ago as 1924, with Richard Barthelmess and May McAvoy starred, takes on a helpful timeliness that freshens its interest and in no way detracts from the charm of a love idyll that should warm the hearts of all who view it, of whatever age or gender.

The introductory sequences of the action are devoted to the legend of the romantic cottage of the title, the only part of a rambling estate not destroyed by fire—as if it indeed bore a charmed life. Here the owner of the pastoral haven, years before, had been accustomed to ensconce newly married couples for the enchanted period of their honeymoons. It is now in the care of a middle-aged housekeeper, to whom the potency of the legend seems to have run out.

Rebirth of Dead Past

There comes to the cottage one day, a sweet but utterly drab young woman of the nearby village who is engaged as a helper, with no wage but a pleasant home, the comfort of the place and its haunting history.

With her advent, romance seems also to return. A young man of means and his fiancee are attracted to the cottage and engage it against their forthcoming marriage. The bitter demands of war decree that their honeymoon never shall take place in the enchantment of their chosen retreat.

When Oliver does return, a casualty of the air service, he comes alone, rebelliously conscious of his disfigurements and seeking escape from all his former associates and the pity of his family and friends.

Laura is the one solace in his life and he is the "Prince Charming" in hers. Sogradual and perfect is the growth of their attachment that each is trapsfigured into a think of beauty in the eyes of the other, under the watchful and helpful guidance of John Hillgrove, a neighboring blind musician, and Mrs. Minott, who has presided over the cottage down the years.

Disillusionment comes to the young couple through the total misconception on the part of Oliver's family as to just what sort of joyful transformation has occured, but by now they are fully equipped to survive it and shed the embarrassment of their scars and plainness, visible only to others than themselves.

Such is the framework of an idyllic and imaginative tale that is spun out in gossamer threads that weave great beauty, a gentle and unforgettable charm and an emotional appeal that must strike home to every normal heart and mind.

Superlatively Acted

The three principals in the cast have been ideally chosen by Harriet Parsons, daughter of The Post's Louella O., to lend grace and forcefulness to her first production.

Robert Young, as Oliver; Dorothy McGuire, the Laura, and Herbert Marshall, John, have never appeared to better individual or collective advantage. They lend the film naturalness, warmth and credibility beyond anything one is accustomed to expect upon the screen.

The assumption of sightlessness is managed by Mr. Marshall with surprisingly realistic effect, and the continued unattractiveness of Oliver and Laura to the outside world, while they remain unblemished to each other in the little world of their own creation marks a complete triumph of photographic skill.

It is among the picture's happier achievements that it is able to boast players of such competence as Spring Byington, Mildred Natwick, Richard Gaines and Master Alec Englander in the supporting roles of chief concern.

Miss Byington's portrayal of Oliver's nervous superficial and misunderstanding mother, is quite as delicately irritating as the part demands, and Miss Natwick's limning of Mrs. Minot, a work of strength and kindly efficiency in the face of doubts that have become magnified during a lifetime of disappointment.

As John's juvenile guide and constant companion, Alev Englander gives the film the lift of an unaffected and amusing juvenile performance. Hilary Brooke is cast as the fiancee, bereft of the sympathy and understanding with which Laura was so richly endowed.

The War Activities Committee's release of the Technicolor "To the Shores of Iwo Jima"; the picturized news events and the piped-in newscast from a local radio station are the auxiliaries of a major feature that is urged upon every discriminating taste as a genuinely superior entertainment.

Uncle Scrooge, By Harold L. Ickes

New York, June 7.

To those who may be curious as to why I should have yielded to the suggestion that I pinch-hit for Leonard Lyons for one day, I am at a loss to make a convincing explanation. As if I did not have a hard enough time keeping up with my own work without doing errands for the neighbors! If you must know, I think that what persuaded me to say "Yes" when my first reaction was a loud and explosive mental "No" was my admiration for L. L.'s colossal nerve. I have always admired nerve even in the most unusual circumstances. Imagine a columnist who probably makes three or four times what I do mooching me for a column and even permitting me to pay for and lick the postage stamp that will carry the manuscript to his office.

Harold Ickes

But the fact—probably the convincing fact—that led me to write this column is that I wanted to say something about Federal salaries and their relation to the public service.

This country seems to operate on the theory that the laborer is worthy of much of his hire unless he holds a public job in which event he isn't worthy of anything. At best, he is worthy of being unworthy. As a result, Congressmen and bureaucrats are, generally speaking, notoriously underpaid and overworked. One of the reasons for this situation is that most people seem to think that a Congressman or a Cabineteer has no higher destiny than to hold himself as a target for the callow jibes of the columnists and commentators.

The fact is that a Congressman to do his job today must be an expert or have expert advice in all of the sciences—physical and social—in business, in the arts, and in the humanities. On a single legislative day he may be asked to pass judgment on bills affecting our foreign policy, the hydrogenation of coal, the worth of quarantines to prevent plant diseases, a proposal for vocational education in our schools, rodent (four-legged) control, and whether Winnie Left Her Behind ought to be permitted to sell the Indian land that she now occupies.

There have been times—perhaps in the days of Pericles, Leonardo da Vinci, or Francis Bacon—when a man might encompass all of the knowledge in the world, but they were a long time ago. Therefore, it becomes imperative that our Congressmen be empowered to hire the best experts that there are, even if they have to raid the columnists and commentators.

Congressman Carl Vinson of Georgia has introduced a bill in behalf of the impecunious Congressmen and bureaucrats who can't afford to pad the seats of their britches to modify the kicks that are aimed at them. He proposes a salary of fifteen thousand dollars a year for members of Congress, one hundred thousand for the President, and something more than at present for those scarcely to be endured persons in between. Congressman Vinson's proposal does not go far enough. Why shouldn't the richest Nation in the world pay a decent wage to the overworked men and women who are driven from column to column and harried from calumny to calumny?

I propose that members of Congress be paid $25,000 a year. They should have all of the technical and office help that they need to do a first-rate job. The national welfare requires the best help that there is and that means money. The best that there is is always the cheapest in the end.

Congressmen should have pensions too, based upon age and length of service. Why should they be immune to the trend that is becoming the general rule? The ill or superannuated Congressman who can't hope to go back to his business or profession, and who has served faithfully, ought not, at the end of the trail, to have to scrouge his fodder from his nearest relative. And if Congressmen are paid a decent salary and are provided with the technical and other help that they need then they ought to give up their mileage allowances, which are inequitable and unfair, and be satisfied with actual expenses when traveling on public business. It ought to be beneath Uncle Scrooge to make his employes "kick back" out of their meager salaries to help pay his expenses for doing his own business.

The President of the United States is at the head of the most important Government in the world and of the richest country. Yet, so far as salary is concerned, he does not rank with Ambassadors from other nations. A comparison of the emoluments of our President with the allowances paid to the head of even a second or a third grade corporation automatically calls for an apology.

The Vice President, whose salary is that of the lowest paid Cabinet member, ought to get seventy-five thousand dollars a year. After all, the man who may become President overnight is, technically speaking, already half a President. As for members of the Cabinet, their salaries should be put somewhere in between the compensation paid to members of Congress and the handout of the Vice President.

And, while I am being so generous with other people's money, I would like to interject that executives, too, ought to have pensions. In some respects, an executive is at a greater disadvantage than a member of Congress. He has—in theory at least—to discontinue all active business and professional connections. A member of Congress does not have to do this. A man can be just as old and tired and hungry if he has just been separated from an executive job as if he were a former member of Congress. We do somewhat better by our Judges, but those who function in the other two branches of the Government are human, too—in some cases more so.

Why don't the columnists and the commentators and the high-priced correspondents and editorial writers get together for once and do something other than a bruising job? Or are they economic snobs?

Drunk Or Diseased

Mrs. George Thorpe's testimony before the Senate Subcommittee on District Appropriations reminds us that precious little has been done to date to minimize the toll of wrecked lives resulting from alcoholism. Washington's penal institutions handle about 8000 cases of alcoholism each year. They are "processed" through the courts, the jail, the workhouse and so forth with monotonous routine. There is no treatment for alcoholism, with the exception of clinics held weekly at the jail since last December without the services of a professional psychiatrist. The cost of handling these cases is estimated as high as half a million dollars. The net result is little more than a sobering up of the victims between their periods of drunkenness.

The nature of the problem is clearly indicated by a recent study of 529 inmates of the District Workhouse. Nearly all of them were alcoholics. Only 45 of them were there for the first time. Roughly half of them had been sentenced to the workhouse 30 times or more. Of this group 56 were there for the fiftieth time; 23 for the seventy-fifth time; 13 for the hundredth time; 3 for the one hundred and twenty-fifth time; and 3 for the one hundred and fiftieth time. In spite of the fact that alcoholism is now generally recognized as a disease, the Nation's Capital does little more than run its victims through a procedure designed to catch criminals.

What Mrs. Thorpe requested was $15,200 for a special clinic in the Health Department's Mental Hygiene Bureau for the diagnosis and treatment of alcoholics. With that nucleus of professional treatment, it would be possible to begin a general program of rehabilitation for this type of offender. Some day the District must acquire a home for scientific treatment of alcoholics. Apparently there is no chance of including such an institution in the present appropriations bill. But the psychiatric service could be readily provided and that would get under way a treatment program which would help to indicate what sort of institution is needed. We do not believe that the Senate Subcommittee will pass over this item if it realizes the importance of the human element involved and the high cost to the District of sending alcoholics again and again through the penal mill with no attempt to uncover the basis of their maladjustment.

Interim Machinery

Whatever is worked out in San Francisco, the new world organization will not arise full-fledged out of the 50-nation discussion. The instrument will have to be ratified. And that takes time. In the case of the United States, there should be no difficulty, since the charter as it has already taken shape corrects all the faults that the bitter-enders 25 years ago saw in the League Covenant. Not an iota of sovereignty will be sacrificed. Not a step will be taken in our name without our consent. The process of ratification, nevertheless, is not likely to be expedited, for there is international business before the Senate which must be disposed of before the charter can be taken up. Moreover, the Congress will be on the homestretch toward recess when the San Francisco Conference comes to an end. It looks, therefore, as if the charter will not come before the Senate till the fall. Other countries may be speedier, but not all of them, and the business of ratification may consume the rest of this year.

The world is thus likely to be without the machinery for orderly reference of disputes and for consultation for another six months or so. To be sure, as Mr. Lippmann suggested the other day, diplomatic machinery will always be available. But the need for a center, a focus, for our international life is just as plain in these days of recurring diplomatic crisis, which is a natural condition in the wake of war, as was the need for a center for Allied discussion of military strategy. This was what Mr. Sumner Welles and Wendell Willkie had in mind when they suggested a United Nations Executive Council. If such a council had been in existence, it could have been a preparatory commission for the San Francisco Conference, and so saved the conferees a lot of headaches which have arisen solely because of inadequate organization. Accordingly, we suggest that the San Francisco Conference leave as interim diplomatic machinery the 14-nation Executive Committee which is the mainspring of the full Conference. The Executive Committee could do many jobs in addition to being a kind of preliminary Security Council. It could proselytize the charter, it could speed the work of ratification; and it could be, in general, a temporary secretariat. We are thinking mainly, however, of the Executive Committee as a means of dealing with our foreign relations. It would have simplified the President's problem in connection with the Syrian problem, for instance, if such a mechanism were now in existence—as a mechanism, that is to say, of the contemplated organization, not of the Conference.

Allied Rule

Experiments in Allied rule in Germany and Austria got under way with the first meeting of the Allied Control Commission in Berlin and the arrival in Vienna of representatives of Britain and America. How they will work out cannot be prognosticated. In great part the answer lies in the statesmanship of the men on the spot, and we can conceive of few tasks where the responsibility is greater, or where success is less dependent on home governments. Theirs is proconsular work in the grand manner. It would test the wisdom of a Cromer, a Lyautey, or a Tasker Bliss. In some ways we miss this type of man in our imperial concerns of today, though for the purposes of the present missions the requirement is for officials who can combine understanding and judgment and authority with the cooperative spirit. In the new administrators' hands the nations will repose a mandate to accomplish a job of singular administrative difficulty and at the same time to maintain Allied unity.

The job is complicated by the knowledge that the organization of the assignment is not yet complete. To be sure, the Russian zone in Germany has been marked out by agreement, and the arrangement with the British has caused no difficulty. The major difficulty in this respect is over the French zone. The French want the right bank of the Rhine, and with it the railroad facilities in that region. This country is perfectly willing to accede to the French request, but for the time being requires the rail facilities for the redeployment of American troops. The argument is still going on. When the little dispute with the French is settled, and when the police troops have been assembled within the occupation zones, the administrators will be able to get down to work.

This occupation will be much different from the last occupation. After the last war the Germans governed themselves, but this time the government will be in Allied hands. To all intents and purposes, therefore, our zone in Germany, which is the southern part, will be an American colony. Moreover, much of Germany has been devastated by the bombing. This is the case with our zone, which in many areas is merely a heap of rubble. Thus the administrative job for the time being will be to restore habitability for much of the population. As for food, the Germans seem to be living well enough off their own hoards, but the food problem will come to the fore when those hoards are exhausted, say, within three months. It so happens that our zone is not self-sufficient. Most of Germany's food comes from the eastern area of Germany, where the Russians are located (where, furthermore, the least damage has been done by bombing), and the administrators will have to make arrangements with the Russians or somebody else when the Germans have eaten up their stocks.

What are the arrangements as between the zones in the matter of exchange and mutual help? There are none so far as we can discover. Is there a common policy on the treatment of Germany? Again there is no sign of an answer. If the Russians isolate their zone, and devote the food surplus in their zone to their own needs at home, even the barest subsistence for our Germans will have to come from other larders, and then there is bound to be grumbling. We talk a great deal about a hard peace. Does that mean that we are going to grind down our Germans? Our Treasury, whence came the idiotic suggestion that the mines of the Ruhr (upon which depends the revival of much of western European industry) should be flooded, is one of the proponents of this sort of medicine. If this turns out to be the case, then we shall find an underground in operation moving workers to the Russian zone, for you may depend upon it that the Russians are interested only in German resuscitation. They need German workers, German skill, German products. The same is true in Austria.

In the absence of a common policy, therefore, the new experiments in Allied rule will be watched with some trepidation. Organization ad hoc is never satisfactory. Policy-making ad hoc is perilous. A lot will depend upon the caliber of the men in Berlin and Vienna in whose hands we have now reposed the destinies of what is left of Germany and Austria. The statesmanship required of them is something to pray for.

Bretton Woods

The action of the House of Representatives in passing the Bretton Woods proposals affords a wonderfully heartening portent for the future. Here is an answer to all who have been wringing their hands in defeatism and despair over the chances of international collaboration. Bretton Woods presented a concrete test. It commits the United States to partnership in the management of world economic affairs. It entails important contributions by this country and in significant respects limits our freedom of economic action. Yet when the test came, the House voted to accept the agreements reached at Bretton Woods by an overwhelming majority of 345 to 18.

Plainly this was not made in any sense a party issue. It happened that the 18 dissenting votes all came from Republicans. But this was undoubtedly an expression of diehard isolationism, not of Republicanism. The vote reflected the powerful current in both parties—and in the country at large—tending toward full acceptance of American responsibilities in world affairs. It is a hopeful indication, therefore, that international cooperation in the political sphere will be embraced with equal readiness.

A great deal of credit belongs to Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., who headed the American delegation to Bretton Woods, to Dr. Harry White, who was one of the principal authors of the agreements reached there and to the congressional leaders of both parties who piloted the legislation to enactment. What the House did yesterday will be looked upon as a signal by the statesmen of every nation. And everywhere men will be fortified in their faith that an integrated world can be genuinely achieved.

French Face

The question will arise on the heels of renewed French military action in Syria in defiance of General de Gaulle's "cease fire" order as to whether the French military are not out of hand. General de Gaulle has given the date of the "cease fire" order as antedating the Churchill note of June 1. If De Gaulle is to be taken seriously, there is no other interpretation than that the military have run amok. But nobody is likely to believe that. What is nearer the facts, doubtless, is that the War Office in Paris is in complete charge of the situation, and that the fresh outbreaks must be traced to De Gaulle's orders. As head of the French state, he can be a Pooh Bah; he can give himself as Minister of War "cease fire" orders, and as Minister of War he can ignore them. The Foreign Office seems to have been reduced to a cipher.

This is a situation which gives point to the statement of the head of the Syrian delegation that the French have ceased to be responsible in international affairs. It is a most serious situation. The loss of face that the French are sustaining not only in the Middle East but all over the world is shocking to all true friends of France. To be sure, resignation of a mandate in the Levant requires, as it did in Britain's case in Iraq, a treaty in its place, but France in recent weeks has not gone about the quest in a manner which will insure her objective. On the contrary, she insists on throwing her "face" away with a reckless disregard of the consequences. How to bail her out is a problem that will become insoluble unless there is more help from France herself. Even her Russian ally cannot ally herself with French conduct. Moscow has associated itself with the other powers in calling for the peaceful settlement of the Levantine dispute. We still think the situation should be explored by the Big Four in relation to the whole Middle East complex. The alternative is to see the Big Four go from crisis to crisis in the Middle East.

Meantime, if the French do not really cease fire, President Truman should speak his piece to General de Gaulle. In this country 50 nations are now meeting to set up machinery for the peaceful settlement of international disputes. In this endeavor France is a party. So are the Arab states. The greater responsibility rests upon France because France is one of the Big Five who are seeking the confidence of the entire world as the custodians of the general peace. It is our frank opinion that by persisting in the quest for a decision of the Syrian dispute by force, De Gaulle would be abusing our hospitality. It is a painful conclusion. De Gaulle has earned a notable place among the leaders of this war of liberation. His services to France, where nobody could have filled his place in the wake of battle, and to the Allied cause are immeasurable. But he seems to be engaged nowadays in pulling himself off his own pedestal and in jeopardizing France's recovery to a leading place in the family of nations. If he cannot be told so by his own people, he must be told by others.

Peronitis

The Junta de la Victoria, which is the Argentine version of our organization for the relief of the Allied peoples, has been closed down. The grounds are that it is Communist. As Communists or Fascists, most of our Argentine friends have been hurried off to concentration camps, where they are languishing in durance vile. The prisons are now so overcrowded that the Peron regime has requisitioned big private houses in which to lodge and torment men and women whose only offense is that they believe in the United Nations which the Peron regime joined on March 27.

These excesses reported from Argentina will no doubt be hailed with satisfaction by the Latin-American division of our State Department, if not by our incarcerated friends. Not, of course, because the division is pro-Peron. On the contrary, it has become very anti-Peron since the newspapers began to publish the truth of what is going on in Argentina. Its fresh theory is that the excesses prove that the Peronites are on their last legs, just as all the genuflections we have made to them are aimed at hastening their dissolution. It is a weird rationale. The greater the lengths to which Peron goes, the more we are supposed to throw our hats in the air. On this theory we might hasten those lengths and therefore the end of Peronitis by sponsoring Peron for the next Nobel Peace Prize.

GENTLY, GENTLY O

I ask myself, beneath the roof
This rainy night while fast they pound
From clouds with many in store for proof,
Just how it is the raindrops sound.
One answer which my fancy finds,
Since it is free to make a choice,
The rain sounds like wind in the pines
That else have neither speech nor voice.
Then, since a sound will borrow sight,
The many falling raindrops make
A sound like slender canes upright
Number on number in the brake.
A dreamy, lulling time they keep
As gently, gently o they fall,
And soon rain has the sound of sleep
While it has sound for me at all.

BYRON HERBERT REECE.

Wartime Controls

By Mark Sullivan

Peacetime Extension

BETWEEN AMERICA and England there is contrast as respects continuing wartime controls. In England, Prime Minister Churchill favors ending the controls. In a speech this week he said that in war "People give up their rights and liberties . . . but this is because the life of their country is in mortal peril . . . but when the war is over and imminent danger to our existence is removed, we cast off these shackles . . ."

Because Mr. Churchill takes that position he is opposed by the English Labor Party. It not only calls for continuance of wartime controls but proposes that England adopt socialism, with government ownership of coal, electricity, gas, inland transport, iron and steel, and partial nationalization of land. On the issue between Mr. Churchill and the Labor Party an election is to be held in July. If England unseats one of the greatest leaders she has had in all her history, for the sake of the Labor Party program, such an outcome would arrest the attention of the world.

IN THE UNITED STATES is no such condition. With us, the strongly prevailing disposition, reflected in Congress, is to get rid of wartime controls. Congress has not liked them, even in wartime. This was shown last April, when Congress defeated a measure which would have required workers to take jobs to which the Government might assign them.

Opposition to extending wartime controls is shown by the attitude in Congress toward the Office of Price Administration. Our present control of prices will be kept longer than the one which existed during World War I. At that time the official price-fixing committee wound itself up voluntarily, within four months after the end of the war, and reported to President Wilson that "no new price regulations seem to be called for."

The present OPA, perhaps with some changes, will be kept longer than that. It may be kept a year or a year and a half after the end of the war. But the strong disposition of Congress is to end it as soon as is practicable.

IT IS RECOGNIZED that OPA has performed an indispensable wartime service. It has kept prices far lower than they otherwise would have been, to the satisfaction of the consuming public. The criticism of its methods is probably no graver than would have been the criticism of any other agency effectively carrying out so difficult a job.

But any agency which effectively restrains prices must put severe limitations on the rights and liberties of citizens. It denies a fundamental right, the right of one man to sell, and another to buy, at such price as the two may agree upon. For the necessary policing which its immense function requires it has a force of inspectors comparable in size to that of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Like any regulatory agency, in the nature of things, it tends to enlarge the area of its control and enforcement mechanism. It has a currency of its own. Today, in buying food and other necessities, a citizen must have two kinds of currency, ordinary money and OPA stamps. Of the two, the OPA stamps are the more essential, for without stamps no amount of money can buy any article covered by OPA regulations.

It is because of these limitations on the rights and liberties of citizens, proper in wartime, that Congress will not extend OPA into peacetime longer than is necessary. It is not at all because OPA has not done good works during wartime, it is because Congress feels that OPA ought not to exist at all in peacetime.

The same attitude is shown just now in the reluctance of Congress to preserve the wartime Fair Employment Practices Committee. Regardless of the merit of preventing discrimination in employment on the basis of race, creed or color, there is reluctance to extend Government control over business, especially little businesses having a small number of workers.

Back Of The Yards

Many of us sympathize with Roger Littleworth in his letter, "Whither Democracy?" in The Post of June 4, and doubtless agree with his contention that "greed for money-getting" and for "vote-getting" make the "self-importance of the individual felt above principles of government and welfare of the whole people."

But isn't the popular answer to these destructive trends really to be found in such neighborhood organization of democratic thinking and doing as Mrs. Agnes Meyer so admirably reported (also in June 4 issue) in her article on Chicago's "Back of the Yards Neighborhood Council?"

In a democracy like ours, government's obligation to serve the interest of the general public is constantly beset by the activities of organized pressure groups. The most effective offset for such pressure is for the general public to maintain pressure groups of their own. "The Back of the Yards" movement is doing just that, and very successfully. Cooperative action is succeeding where merely talking has failed.

O. L. STEVENS.
Washington, June 4.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Our Junketeering Senators

THE SENATE of the United States is a lonely place these days. You might be able to get a quorum of Senators in Rome or in London or in Berlin, but it's hard to corral enough votes here in Washington, in spite of the fact that business of the utmost urgency is before the Senate.

Some of these Senators would serve their country better if they stayed at home. And that goes especially for the little band headed by Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana. Officially it is a Senate subcommittee on communications. But its function seems to be to spread disaffection and disunity.

THESE JUNKETEERING Senators appeared before a GI forum at a Red Cross club in Rome. While they tried to keep their remarks off the record, that didn't work and the story came out.

According to a reliable news account, the discussion inevitably turned to Russia and our relations with the Soviet Union. Finally, Senator Albert W. Hawkes of New Jersey, a Republican, put this question to the GI audience:

"How do you men feel, the great majority of you soldiers, who have fought the war and been here a long time? How do you feel about finishing the job by fighting the Russians?"

Before the audience could make any response, one of the other Senators, realizing what a boner this was, switched the subject. But if the Senator from New Jersey had talked to any GI's at all, he would not have needed to ask that question.

THEY ARE LONGING for home. They don't want any more war. They don't see any reason why we should fight Russia.

Such irresponsibility makes it all but impossible to carry out a reasonable foreign policy. Every incident of this kind is eventually reported to the Kremlin. Indiscreet talk on the part of some Americans at San Francisco was duly reported to the Russians.

Imagine the shoe on the other foot. Imagine a member of the Soviet Politburo or one of the top marshals of the Soviet Union addressing Russian troops and asking them if they were ready to go to war against the United States. Imagine what an uproar that would cause over here.

The Senate will soon have before it the critical issue of our time—participation in a world organization. The preliminaries essential to participation—reciprocal trade extension and the Bretton Woods Monetary Agreement—are just ahead.

The public will be watching the Senate. They will look for leadership. They will look for responsibility in the discussion of a question that touches the lives of all of us. They will remember that there were giants in the Senate once, men who spoke out of passionate conviction and profound knowledge.

Last week Senator La Follette of Wisconsin delivered a long, carefully prepared and carefully reasoned speech on the new league and the issues of power versus democracy. Whether you agreed with his thesis or not, it was a speech that deserved respectful consideration.

YET only three or four Senators were on the floor as he spoke. One of them, fortunately, was the conscientious new Senator from Arkansas, William J. Fulbright. He interrogated La Follette from time to time. Something like a debate, or at any rate a discussion, took place.

One of the new Senators was talking privately about this very thing the other day. He has several ideas he wants to present.

"But you know," he said, "you feel so foolish standing there and talking to two or three people. Maybe I'll get used to it. But it's hard not to have an audience."

Besides reciprocal trade and Bretton Woods, the continuance of OPA is coming up and action must be taken by the end of this month, when the Price Control Act expires. That, too, is a measure that touches all of us vitally.

About 18 Senators have been in Europe. Most of them are now on the way home. An effort will be made to keep them in this country while important measures are under consideration. That is their job, and the folks back home will be watching to see whether they do it.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must carry writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

Desk Commandos' Commissaries

I read with astonishment in this morning's Post of the sneers directed against the so-called "desk commandos" who allegedly fatten themselves on the supplies of the Army commissaries.

First, it will be conceded by anyone with even a modicum of intelligence that the final assignment of soldiers is entirely decided by the Army, and the soldier who finds himself assigned in or around the military district of Washington can no more help it than the soldier who finds himself at the front.

Second, it doesn't seem to have occurred to the wives of men serving overseas that if the soldier who obtains his meat at the Army commissary did not eat at home, where the meal planning and preparation are taken over by his wife, he would be consuming those same supplies through regular Army channels. S. L. P.

The complaint (the Army has another word for it) of some local housewives seems to be that the families of men serving overseas should also be entitled to buy at commissaries. The point is that the Army is primarily concerned with adequately feeding its men and the families come in rather incidentally. If men stationed at Fort Belvoir, for instance, are fortunate enough to get quarters on the post, they are entitled to use the commissary and no one gets excited about that. But there are only enough post quarters for the top-ranking officers and noncoms, so the majority of married men must live off the post, and, like those who live on the post, have commissary privileges.

The people who make little cracks about "desk chair commandos," etc., might remember that desk soldiers don't choose their jobs any more than front-line men do, and that many of the present desk men are former combat soldiers. We whose husbands are stationed here feel very fortunate, and do not, to my knowledge, gripe constantly about the fact that we had to store furniture at home, live in dirty furnished rooms while waiting for apartments here, buy $400 worth of junky furniture to get an apartment, be preyed and profiteered on by every local sharper out to "do his bit" for the boys.

ARMY WIFE.

I am an officer in the Naval Reserve, with a bit more than three years' service in this war. I wear the Presidential Unit Citation and two area ribbons, one with four battle stars on it. Now I am fighting the "Battle of Washington" in the Bureau of Aeronautics.

Your effort to make a Roman holiday for the civilian populace out of the present plight of the Fort Myer commissary smacks of setting tweed against khaki. The spectacle of the truly eminent Post thus demeaning itself—as if it were a scandal-mongering sheet, is not edifying. Mr. Hurd's, Adele Bernstein's and Fred Brandeis' articles serve no other purpose than rabble-rousing, which is not the usual role of your good paper. It seems to me to be particularly unfortunate at this time to stir up trouble between these two elements in the country whose postwar cooperation and friendliness are essential to the nation's health. LT. COMMANDER.

We holders of the Pentagon Fortress were plopped unceremoniously in the middle of Washington with all of its shortages and lines and "No Apt. for Rent" signs with our hands full of babies and no one who gave a solid dam whether we had a place to live . . . or eat . . . much less anyone who worried what we ate! But more important, no "family butcher" to take care of us because we weren't a "regular customer."

We lived here two years before applying for a commissary card. Do you want to know why I finally did it? Because I got sick and tired of standing in meat lines for hours on end . . . only to have a "regular customer" elbow her way up and give the password.

MRS. W. A. G.

I resent being sneered at in print because on the basis of my record in combat I was chosen to come back to the Pentagon to do an important desk job.

I suppose that you are faced with the lack of experienced personnel in your newsroom. They are, however, doing a very large group a very grave injustice and I cannot believe that you would want staff assignments to be coupled with derision and scorn. MAJOR.

When the Army assigns men to Washington, it neither pays them extra, as it does when it sends them overseas, nor feeds them, as it does overseas or in local Army camps, nor does it house them. Their rents are high compared to their salaries, and they must buy their own food. They have the advantage of being with their families in Washington. They have the spurious advantage of not being "in the fight"—which to many is an irksome and unhappy resolution to their decisions to pitch in. And these men—none of them—is here through choice! They represent the over-aged American, willing to give up profitable wartime work at home in order to help the progress of the war—the true enlisted man. They represent the limited-service American, whose eyes, or lungs, stomachs or hearts are not worth the Army's risk in the field. They represent the overseas redeployee, the hero of, not many weeks past for whom you would have gone graciously without your daily meat. They represent the man of special skill—just as real and necessary as the skill of the airplane mechanic's—who is needed at a desk or drawing board.

A CIVILIAN.

And when you have satisfied the demands of the poor underprivileged by depriving us of our carnal opulence, please turn your talented minds from obfuscation toward clarification. Let's quit the griping and get on with the war. We want to go home. MRS. E. S. B.

Bretton Woods

By Ernest Lindley

Resounding House

A FEW MONTHS ago anyone who would have predicted that the Bretton Woods Agreements would be approved by the House, with as few as 18 dissenting votes, would have been regarded as an exceptionally wishful thinker. But in the showdown only the extreme isolationist tail of the Republican Party remained in opposition.

It is important not only that the agreements should be approved by Congress with reasonable promptness but that they should be approved by an overwhelming majority of both parties, so that there will be no doubt anywhere in the world that the vote represents a firm national decision standing above and beyond partisanship.

What brought about this crystallization of bipartisan support for a measure on which there were so many differences of opinion a short while ago?

THE TREASURY'S technicians, under the direction of Assistant Secretary Harry D. White, knew their business. At the outset, a good many members of Congress doubted this. The agreements are rather complicated and their subject matter lies outside the knowledge of most citizens. A good many of the experts outside the Government, especially those connected with big banks, were opposed to the agreements.

But as the hearings and discussions proceeded, the Treasury's experts showed convincingly that they were really experts who had made exhaustive preparations and who had thought through the problems with which they had to deal. It became plain also that in their negotiations with other countries they had never lost sight of the American interest, and that the compromises which they had made, with their eyes open, were probably the best they could get. It became evident that any attempt to renegotiate the agreements probably would result in something less good or nothing at all, and that nothing at all would probably be much more injurious to our interests than the worst that the banker-opponents could prophesy as a result of Bretton Woods.

An interpretative or clarifying amendment agreed to by the Treasury took the edge off one of the chief objections of the bankers. Opposition from that source began to dwindle. Possibly some of the bankers began to realize that they were politically isolated. Possibly, after further study, some of them changed their minds about the merits of the issues.

THE HOUSE BANKING and Currency Committee worked conscientiously. Outwardly, it was hard if not impossible to tell until the committee voted where some of the most influential Republican members would stand. But when they took their position, they carried most of their colleagues with them. A great deal of credit belongs to Representative Jesse P. Wolcott of Michigan, and among others, to Representatives Fred L. Crawford of Michigan and Ralph A. Gamble of New York.

But behind all these influences in the foreground one could sense the popular feeling that this was a test of the readiness and determination of the United States to play its appointed role on the world stage and that the answer should be an unequivocal "yes." It is the same pressure which one has been able to feel for months behind the proposed international organization and which assures that the charter written at San Francisco will be ratified by the Senate.

The Bretton Woods Agreements now go to the Senate. But the House roll call will resound throughout the world. It will be taken as evidence that the United States is firmly committed to international cooperation.

Humans Are Starving!

Funny how the meat I've eaten recently—even the meat I've prepared for my children—has tasted like ashes in the mouth.

Ever since the Government release stating that meat shipments to starving Europe would be cut off for this summer, we have not enjoyed our semiweekly allotments from the neighborhood butcher.

I have great respect for Mr. Chester Bowles of the OPA, and when he says there were no political factors influencing the decision, I believe him. But there must have been (as there should be) a consideration of what the American people want.

And there, I believe, a mistake has been made: too much stock has been put in our dinner table grousing. I cannot imagine that the American people honestly want to go on tucking away as much meat as they have been, if this means that not even token shipments will go from the "Land of Plenty" to the undernourished children and expectant mothers of Europe.

Nor, when I say "Land of Plenty," am I being anachronistic. We still have so much milk and cheese and fish, so many whole-grain cereals and breads; we still have such intact cities, such burgeoning countryside that, in 1945, it's almost embarrassing.

Anyone can share when he has more than he needs. It takes a pretty nice guy to go on sharing when he no longer has enough for himself. But we are nice—and I remain to be convinced that we would rather assuage our stomachs than our consciences.

Orderly Revolution

V—The CIO and the Catholic Church in the Back of the Yards Council

By Agnes E. Meyer

THE GREATEST achievement of the Back of the Yards Neighborhood Council is that two of our most powerful authoritarian institutions, the C. I. O. unions and the Catholic Church, are cooperating democratically under its aegis, with each other and with the whole community. The importance of this to the future of our country cannot be overestimated. The one group, moreover, is as radical as the other is conservative. Yet both are able to agree upon a wide field of common objectives, and to subordinate their divergent points of view to the popular welfare.

Agnes E. Meyer

The various clergy of the Back of the Yards Council, all Catholic with the exception of one Lutheran pastor, described what happened socially and spiritually to them and their congregations when the movement began to spread. "There would have been pandemonium among the various nationalities at the beginning of the war without the Back of the Yards movement," said Pastor Brauer, the German Lutheran. "As it was, not a single unkind word was spoken. This is the real test of the strength of the movement. If we could stand that strain upon international friendship, why can't the world do likewise? To be sure, Polish children started to pummel mine when the Germans invaded Poland, but Father Plawinski put a stop to that at once."

"The Catholic Germans by chance had a big banquet just as the European war broke out," interjected Father Marquard, the German Catholic priest. "Father Plawinski made a point of addressing the banquet to assure his German neighbors that in America, we were brothers.

"Four years ago," continued Pastor Brauer, "I celebrated my 26th anniversary. The president of our Lutheran Synod and other officials were present. Two Catholic priests appeared at the festivities to present me with this gold watch I am wearing, as a token of esteem from the Catholic members of the Council."

He described how all the various nationalities live huddled around their respective churches. "Before the days of the Back of the Yards Council, I and my German Lutheran congregation lived in quarantine but now the air is free," he concluded.

FOR THE CATHOLIC churches the breaking down of the nationality barriers, the common recreational activities, the feeding and health measures for the children and the numerous educational programs were no less important.

"We discovered that every parish had the same problems," said Father Ambrose, "and that unity meant effectiveness. We freely admit that the Council achieved for the people more than the churches had done or could do by themselves."

"Father Ambrose," I interrupted, "since the Catholic churches are in such a majority, what is to prevent them from dominating the whole Council?"

The good man looked hurt. "To begin, that simply can't be done. The priests can no more control the Council than the C. I. O. unions can. Every organization in the Council shares the additional strength it derives from the other 185 members. If we Catholics should attempt to control, we would simply be left high and dry by the other members. One of the Catholic parishes made the mistake of trying to introduce church politics into the Back of the Yards movement. It was promptly expelled with the full approval of the priests on the Council."

"Well do we know that great things are happening to our people and to our priests as well," continued Father Ambrose. "Why, Mrs. Meyer," he exclaimed with eyes twinkling, "now I love all the nationalities—even the Irish. For the first time this year all the Catholic nationalities had a common retreat. The priests rotated the services, and Bishop Sheil, who is honorary director of the Back of the Yards Council, preached to us all together. It was a joyous, a memorable, occasion. We felt what democracy could mean to the Catholic Church. The Back of the Yards movement is the realization of a great hope. We Catholics are becoming more Catholic. Only now are we beginning to feel through community cooperation that the word Catholic means Catholic, the church universal."

FATHER AMBROSE'S face was transfigured by the light of love and silence fell upon that gathering of diverse tongues and religions. The peace of democratic understanding reigned amongst us and lifted a terrible burden from my mind. In several other parts of the country, I have encountered wholehearted cooperation of the Catholic Church with community endeavors. But in other places I have seen the authoritarianism of the Catholic Church clash so sharply with democratic principles, that the possibility of another conflict between Church and State has long oppressed me. These priests in Back of the Yards have demonstrated the regenerative force of Catholicism when it has the faith to rely on spiritual rather than political power. Acting upon the Catholic belief that all human beings alike, reflect the face of God, they are finding a path on which democracy and Catholicism can go forward harmoniously toward a mutual enrichment.

The following day I discussed the Back of the Yards Council with the labor union leaders at their headquarters.

"When the UPWA-CIO first tried to organize the stockyard workers," said Herbert March, president of District No. 1 of the union, "we met with the antagonism of all the so-called respectable people, including the Catholic Church. We couldn't even get a hall for meetings. We had every form of opposition. But we kept up the organization drive until it was clearly established that we represented a majority of the packing house workers. As certain members of the industry refused to negotiate with us, we threatened to pull a strike. The Back of the Yards Council was only five months old when it suddenly found itself in the midst of the greatest crisis that had ever confronted our community. Packing house strikes are notoriously violent. Men who earn their living with knives, are not peaceful strikers. The strike meant hardship, bloodshed and tragedy. The Back of the Yards leaders knew the people were entitled to higher wages and better working conditions. Their people were largely our people. So they mobilized the support of the whole Council behind the Union, including the churches. At one of the first meetings, it was a priest who presented the resolution that the packing houses should recognize the Union and avoid a strike.

"THE Council members moved with great speed," continued Mr. March, "considering how many people and organizations they had to mobilize who had no connection with the labor movement, such as the churches and the businessmen whom you might have expected to be against us.

"The Catholic churches stood behind us in a block. Priests in Back of the Yards took to the radio, to the lecture hall and to the street corner in a militant campaign for the CIO. With the community behind us, we planned a mass meeting at the Coliseum to decide whether we would strike. We invited Bishop Sheil to speak, and he accepted. The morale of the people reached a pitch never seen before in our community."

From at least a dozen different people I had already heard how heroically Bishop Sheil held to his resolution to address the joint labor rally of the CIO and the Back of the Yards Council, although he was threatened daily and hourly. His telephone rang constantly and ominous voices said "Tell Sheil, if he tries to go to that meeting, he'll never get to the hall." Three days before the meeting, Herbert March, the union organizer, was shot in the shoulder and a gun was fired through the window of a restaurant where the bishop was lunching. The forces of reaction were so aroused that the police cleared the streets through which the bishop had to pass to the Coliseum and lined them with machine guns.

Veterans' Guide

GI Program for Education Is Pretty Liberal, After All

Way up in Alaska, a global war veteran reads this stuff of mine in the Anchorage Times. He wrote a nice letter, but, like all GI's and former GI's, he had a couple of gripes—one about the subsistence allowance for a vet who goes in for the GI bill education scheme and the other about loans as planned in the GI bill. You might be interested in his two kicks and my answer, so here's the way I wrote to him:

"Your interesting and thoughtful letter finally got down to me here, but I haven't had time until now to acknowledge.

"You ask if it's possible for a married man to clothe, board and provide living quarters for his wife and himself while going to school full time on $75 a month. It's possible, but, of course, difficult.

"Yet I don't think we should sneer at $75 a month. It seems a small sum for a man and wife when I think of it as a number of dollars. But when I consider that the Government will agree to pay for all tuition, books, supplies and fees up to 500 bucks a school year, plus $75 a month for a man and wife, it seems to be a generous proposition.

"I can't forget that thousands and millions of young men in the past have taken training courses and gone through years of college education on their own—with no financial help from the Federal Government or from anyone.

"They have worked part time, they have worked and saved during summer vacations and thus, wanting knowledge, got it despite financial difficulties. So when the Government offers the GI education program to veterans—offers a year of training to any qualified former serviceman regardless of age, and more than a year to those whose education was interrupted by service—I can't help but feel that it's a rather handsome offer after all.

"The young man who, before he entered service, intended to get some education or was getting it, is certainly in a better position now. If his folks were paying his way, they're now relieved of most and probably all of the school costs, and he has $50 more a month than his parents would have given him for personal expenses. He would not lose any of the $50, if he had (or earned) any other income or if his parents contributed.

"If he was working his way or intended to do so, he now will be able practically to loaf through, because he'll only have to work enough to collect a little extra dough for subsistence.

"Along about the middle of your letter, in writing about the 4 per cent interest rate which is the maximum permitted for a veterans' Government-guaranteed loan, you say, 'we know that these institutions (private lending institutions) are not going to lend money at 4 per cent to veterans when they can get 6 per cent or more elsewhere.'

"But the facts don't say so. Already 3389 loans for homes, farms and business under the GI bill guaranteed-loan plan have been made to veterans by private institutions. None of them are over 4 per cent either.

"I have a hunch there would be many more, if prices weren't generally above ordinary or average values. The Veterans' Administration can't complete a guaranteed loan if the price to be paid for the property is greater than a reasonable normal value. I'd guess this throws out the possibility of many loans.

"But bankers and other lenders generally are anxious to help the veterans and often would make a loan to a veteran at the 4 per cent rate, but are stopped by the fact that the Veterans' Administration can't guaranty on account of how the dollar-gone property cost is excessive.

"I've heard it said that some lenders who don't like the low 4 per cent rate are scared to refuse (if the Veterans' Administration will guarantee) because public and Government opinion is with the veteran, and the refusal of loans to veterans, because only a low interest rate is allowed, might create odors as the facts began to boil out to the public."

The Gallup Poll

Public Favors Continuance Of High Taxes Until VJ-Time

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 7.—The notion that the common people will applaud the spending of public money on their behalf, but put off or shirk the responsibility of footing the bill through taxes, receives a rude shock in the latest Nation-wide poll by the Institute.

Three out of every four people who are now required to pay Federal income taxes say there should be no reduction whatever in those taxes until after Japan is defeated. The typical American taxpayer is himself voting, in short, to keep unchanged the highest tax rate in American history, even though powerful voices have been raised in Congress suggesting that the burden on him be eased this year.

The general public likewise believes there should be no reduction of taxes on business until after the end of the Pacific war.

The poll findings follow:

"Do you think Congress should reduce income taxes this year, or should this wait until after Japan is defeated?"

The vote of all persons in the poll who said they now have to pay income taxes is as follows:

Cut income taxes this year	18%
Wait	77
No Opinion	5

The vote of the whole public, the nontaxpayers included along with taxpayers, was found almost the same as the above table.

The second question was:

"Do you think Congress should reduce taxes on business this year, or should this wait until after Japan is defeated?"

The general public voted as follows:

Cut business taxes this year	16%
Wait	74
No Opinion	10

A special tabulation was made of the vote of business and professional men regarding the lowering of taxes on business this year. It was found that the great majority—71 per cent, or more than 7 in every 10—said, "wait till the war ends."

The fact set forth above suggest that critics of democracy, scoffers at the masses, have rather seriously misjudged the average man in matters of taxation. The famous historian Macaulay predicted in the nineteenth century that America "would be as fearfully plundered from within by her own people as Rome was plundered from without by the Gauls and Vandals."

But the evidence from many polls shows that the average American has a sense of responsibility about taxation and is not out to get all he can from the Government and give as little as possible in return.

Today's vote also indicates a public sensing of the seriousness and costliness of the war which still lies ahead in the Pacific.

Charlottesville to Get 65 New House Units

Charlottesville, Va., June 7, (Spl.).—Recognizing a shortage of housing facilities in Charlottesville, the National Housing Agency has authorized the construction here of 65 family dwelling units, including 15 for Negroes, it has been announced by the regional NHA office in Atlanta.

The housing units have been authorized under what has been designated as the H-2 program and calls for construction by private enterprise, according to Robert K. Creighton, regional representative.

Under the program, the 50 white housing units will have a rental ceiling of $60 and a sales ceiling of $7,500. While 20 of these units must be held for rent during the existing emergency, 30 units may be produced for sale or owner occupancy.

Units authorized for occupancy by Negroes will have a rental ceiling of $25 and a sales ceiling of $3,500 per unit. Five of these units may be produced for rent and ten for sale or owner occupancy.

New Va. Report Lists Hunting Accidents

Richmond, Va., June 7 (AP).—During the hunting season of 1944-45 there were 26 hunting accidents in Virginia, including 11 fatalities, the State Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries reported today.

First of its kind ever compiled by the game department, a report showed that 11 of the accidents, including five of the fatalities, were self-inflicted. In five other instances, one hunter was killed by another. In the eleventh case, that show circumstances of death.

of a Culpeper man, records do not

T. E. Clarke, executive director of the commission, commented that "the accident report emphasizes the need of training boys more adequately in the care and handling of firearms. Youths 17 years old or younger were involved in 10 of the accidents, and five of the hunters who died were in this age bracket."

4 Awards Are Made At Monroe Exercises

Fredericksburg, Va., June 7, (Spl.).—Gilbert Jackson Sullivan, four-sport athlete and a scholastic leader, was awarded the Kiwanis Cup at exercises last night graduating 63 boys and girls from James Monroe High School here. The cup is awarded to the student who has contributed most to the welfare of the school during his four-year course.

Sullivan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Sullivan. He will enter the University of Virginia July 1.

Miss Gene Parke Jones, class valedictorian, received the scholarship awarded by the local branch of the American Association of University Women to attend Mary Washington College here. Two other girls were awarded scholarships to Mary Washington by State Senator Benjamin T. Pitts. They were Jeanette Hopkins and Katherine Chartters.

Father and Son Methodists at Pastors' Parley

By Robert Tate Allan

Westminister, Md., June 7.—The family ministerial tradition is still strong in Methodism, a check-up of the annual Baltimore Methodist Conference indicated today.

Attending the sessions at Western Maryland College are ten father and son ministerial "teams," as well as ministers who are sons of deceased pastors.

Fathers and Sons There

The Rev. William F. Wright, pastor of Douglas Memorial Methodist Church, Washington, conference secretary, is here with two sons—the Rev. William J. Wright, of Bel Air Md., and the Rev. Malcolm Wright, of East Harford Circuit. Another son is Army Chaplain Harold Wright, now in Germany, and former Baltimore Methodist pastor. The sons represent the third generation of ministers. Their grandfather was the late Dr. J. A. Wright, pastor in the former Methodist Protestant body.

The Rev. Selwyn K. Cockrell, pastor of Union Methodist Church, Washington, is present with his son, the Rev. Francis I. Cockrell of Clifton Avenue Church, Baltimore, and former pastor of Bethesda Methodist Church.

Then there are Dr. Walter M. Michael, pastor of Centre Street Church, Cumberland, Md., former pastor of Eldbrooke and Brightwood Churches, Washington, and his son, the Rev. Marion S. Michael of the Huntington-Emmanuel charge, Maryland, and native Washingtonian.

In Family Tradition

Dr. Frank Reid Isaac, sr., retired minister, is here with his offspring, the Rev. Frank Reid Isaac, jr., superintendent of the Strawbridge Methodist Home for Boys.

Others are the Revs. J. T. Ensor and son, the Rev. L. S. Ensor; the Rev. J. R. Esaias, sr., and the Rev. J. R. Esaias, jr.; the Rev. Edward Thomas Kirkley and son, the Rev. C. F. Kirkley; the Rev. George D. Sampson and son, Army Chaplain Paul J. Sampson; the Rev. Edgar T. Read and son, the Rev. Charles E. Read, and the Rev. Ernest W. Simms and son, the Rev. Edward R. Simms.

The Rev. Philip C. Edwards, pastor of the Woodside Methodist Church, Silver Spring, is taking an active role in the conference. His father was the late Dr. John R. Edwards, former West Washington Methodist district superintendent and who was serving as associate pastor of Foundry Methodist Church when he died.

Oppose Liquor Manufacture

The conference will close Friday night with the reading of the annual pulpit appointments by Bishop Charles Wesley Flint of the Washington Methodist area.

Approximately 650 delegates to the annual meeting went unanimously on record in opposition to use of grains and other foodstuffs in manufacture of alcoholic beverages.

The convention adopted the resolution on presentation by Dr. George W. Crabbe, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America.

It referred to the present food shortage as immediate reason why the practice should be discontinued. A copy is to be sent to President Truman, urging his cooperation in cutting liquor manufacture.

Resolution to Truman

It was agreed to send the resolution to the President and Chairman Sabath (D., Ill.) of the House Rules Committee, where the legislation now rests.

Criticizing the use of radio to advertise alcoholic beverages, Dr. Crabbe said a radio network had refused $30,000 for a year-long series of broadcasts on prohibition because it said the subject was controversial. He urged that radio stations make their facilities available to prohibitionists and nonprohibitionists on an equal basis.

It was also requested that the board of education and the board of temperance each name a committee of three persons to form a program of alcohol and narcotic education for the conference.

State to Purchase $6,700,000 Bonds

Annapolis, Md., Junce 7 (AP).—A $6,700,000 war bond purchase in the Seventh War Loan drive will be made by the State treasury, Governor O'Conor announced today.

Following consultation with State Treasurer Hooper S. Miles and Comptroller J. Millard Tawes, the chief executive disclosed that five million dollars of the amount to be bought would be derived from the State's postwar construction fund.

With the five million dollar investment from the postwar construction fund, the State will have invested 10 million dollars in certificates of indebtedness, the Governor said.

The chief executive declared the Seventh War Loan fund committees of the State's 23 counties would be credited with portions of the $6,700,000 purchase.

'Contract' Bride, Seaman Remarry

Gettysburg, Pa., June 7 (Spl.).—Miss Ruth A. Wentz and Chief Warrant Officer Harry F. Biesecker, who were "married by contract" last fall while he was on duty along the Western Front, were married again Tuesday evening in Flohr's Lutheran Church by the Rev. Dr. Harvey D. Hoover, Gettysburg.

Officer Biesecker acknowledged the marriage papers in Europe last November and his bride signed them before a Gettysburg notary public, two days before Christmas. Now the bridegroom is home on leave and will take his bride, a Homer City (Pa.) school teacher, with him to Texas after a wedding trip.

Church, Labor, School Groups Hit Peace Draft

By the Associated Press

Religous, labor and education leaders spoke vigorously against peacetime draft legislation yesterday on the ground that the issue can wait until the war is won.

Their arguments were made to the House Committee on Postwar Military Policy by spokesmen for the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, the Catholic Heirarchy in the United States, the Rabbinical Assembly of America, the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

All favored adequate defense but suggested that action on peacetime military conscription should be deferred until victory is won and the pattern of peace is clear.

Says Future Not Clear

Dr. Herbert J. Burgstahler, president of Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio, testified that the Federal Council of Churches of Christ opposed the bill because "the precise nature or strength of armaments that may be required can not be foreseen now."

"The people for whom I speak and the churches with which they are identified hold to the view that our Nation should not at this time take any action which would reverse our historic policy with respect to compulsory military training."

Mrs. William A. Hastings, Madison, Wis., president of the P-TA, suggested that peace time military training is unnecessary.

"If," she said, "a reasonably sized standing Army, along with a strong National Guard force, is ready for an immediate emergency, then our youth, in good physical condition, skilled and alert in mind, can soon be prepared for any part they must play."

Await Peace, Catholic Urge

Chairman Woodrum (D., Va.), read a letter from the Very Rev. Msgr. Howard J. Carroll, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, saying the Catholic Hierarchy in the United States believed that a matter "so important should await decision until the end of the war when it can be known what the international situation will be."

Byrl A. Whitney, assistant general counsel of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, testified that passage of the bill now would be an open invitation to other countries to prepare for war.

"There is," he said, "something pitifully ironical about a nation vigorously preparing for the next war and delaying the problems of peace while fighting a war to destroy militarism and to establish enduring world peace."

"Dangerous," Says Gordis

Saying tha tthe Rabbinical Assembly is not a pacifist organization, Dr. Robert Gordis, president, declared that action now on the legislation "would be unwise and even dangerous.

"What is more," he said, "a large standing army with an active bureaucracy and a permanent conscription system must ultimately undermine democracy . . . For us to adopt this peacetime military training program would mean to serve notice that we have no faith in the capacity of the United Nations to achieve a lasting peace organization."

Milton Berle, comedian, will emcee the two-hour show, accompanying the presentation in the formal gardens.

If the day is sunny the public is invited, but should it rain, the show will be transferred to the Red Cross Auditorium where patients will get first choice of the limited seats.

12 Veterans Fly To D. C. From Italian Front

Twelve veterans of the Italian campaign arrived here yesterday on a C-54 transport plane, the first group of Army ground forces personnel to reach Washington via air transport under the Army's redeployment program.

Many of the group, who have been overseas about three years serving with infantry and armored divisions in Africa and Italy, will now go to the Army separation centers for discharge while others will receive furloughs prior to Pacific duty against the Japs.

The plane was originally scheduled to land elsewhere but one of the motors conked out and two others developed trouble on the trip over so that a landing was made at the Washington Airport.

Those on the plane were: Pfc. David Wilhoit, Blaunox, Pa.; Pfc. Martin Kosak, Hartford, Conn., and Sergt. Joseph J. Abdella, Danbury, Conn., all of whom served with the First Armored Division and had been overseas 37 months. Sergt. Abdella, with 120 discharge points, topped the group in this respect. The rest of the group, all of whom served in the Infantry, were: Pfc. Jonathan Berwin, Scranton, Pa.; Pfc. Eugene Moyer, Berwick, Pa.; Technician Fifth Grade Thomas Gormley, Providence, R. I.; Pvt. MEMPHIS A GREAT PLACE TO LOCATE ---A GREAT PLACE TO LIVE

Ene, $6.40 Shot, Scores at Charles Town

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Senator William A. Langer of North Dakota is a gentleman with commendable zeal and an impossible plan. He has introduced in the Senate a bill designed to help returning war veterans by requiring that 10 per cent of the players hired by major league baseball clubs be men who have lost "one or more" arms, legs or hands.

POVICH

It won't work, even if it's constitutional. And it's unnecessary. As in the case of one-armed Pete Gray of the Browns, the ball clubs would be willing and eager to sign any one-armed or one-legged player who could make the grade, and they wouldn't need compulsion. The wounded veterans themselves wouldn't like to be big leaguers by sufferance. Those who could make it on their merits would, of course, be happy.

Anyway, you can't legislate players into the big leagues. The genus fan wouldn't like it. And would be very apt to forget a player's war record in the heat of competition. A war hero who strikes out with the bases full is no hero at that particular moment to the rabid customers who came to see the team win. Senator Langer's bill would be putting the war wounded on a ridiculous and unnecessary spot.

The good Senator is asking the big leagues to lower their standard of play as a rehabilitation measure, which is hardly fair. Certainly there are other industries and professions in this country which could lend themselves more easily to the rehabilitation of the wounded than the highly skilled art of big league baseball.

The big leagues compromised with quality after Pearl Harbor and the standard of play has been admittedly lower, but it is significant that in the 106 years of baseball's history only one player with a missing limb has ever measured up to big league demands. He is Pete Gray, of course, and his case must be labeled as a wondrous exception.

All of which is not to say that baseball does not have a duty by the returning veterans, either wounded or unwounded. The major leagues will be under the gun of censure if they don't take some steps to play a part in rehabilitation. Certainly there must be coaching jobs or other comparatively sedentary duties on the clubs in which wounded veterans who had known only baseball as a profession during the war would not be ill at ease.

Senator Happy Chandler, the new baseball commissioner, has frequently voiced his intention of spreading the baseball gospel among the youth of the Nation in a more emphatic way than ever before. The big leagues have the funds with which to send baseball emissaries into the colleges and schools and onto the sandlots, and war veterans should inherit that role.

Aside from donating $25,000 a year to the American Legion for its junior baseball program, the late Judge Landis never was active in the promotion of baseball among the nation's youth. Chandler, in contrast, has a passion for that idea and as high commissioner is in a position to find employment for war veterans in the jobs that must be created.

It is time, anyway, that baseball busied itself with popularizing the game in the colleges, schools and on the lots. It is no secret that baseball has been losing out to golf and tennis among the juvenile pursuits. And college baseball, once better than the good minor league brand, has become a joke in point of skill. The majors have a job to do in that respect.

If Senator Langer's plan of compelling the majors to hire as 10 per cent of their personnel men who have lost limbs were adopted, it wouldn't be very important in the rehabilitation scheme anyway. Ten per cent would mean 40 men at the most, and the Nation's rehabilitation problem must deal in millions of men.

The physically fit ball players wouldn't pull their punches in competition with wounded veterans, anyway. Sympathy would go out the window. Monte Stratton of the White Sox, who lost a leg in a hunting accident at the height of his pitching career, gave up the idea of returning to the game because he knew the players would make it miserable for him by bunting.

When Dutch Leonard broke his ankle four years ago, and was out of the game from April to September, he finally returned to action against the Yankees. Before the game, as each Yankee came up the steps out of the dugout, they had a kind word for Leonard by way of welcoming him back. "How's the leg," each one asked sympathetically. "Pretty good," was Leonard's answer. "Glad to hear it," was the stock reply. And then the first five men in the Yankee lineup tried to bunt him out of the game.

Browns Top Chisox Twice, 6-0 and 6-2

Chicago, June 7 (AP).—The Champion St. Louis Browns battered three Chicago pitchers for a total of 20 hits today to win both ends of a doubleheader, 6-0 and 6-2, before 2881, to win a four-game series with the White Sox by a 3-1 margin.

The Browns, shutout yesterday, 4-0, came back today to bunch their hits in the opener and take advantage of three Chicago errors to beat Ed Lopat, 6-0, and were off to a 6-0 lead in the nightcap as they shelled Johnny Humphries from the mound in the sixth inning.

The Sox scored a run in the last of the sixth and another in the seventh off Tex Shirley to prevent a shutout in the nightcap. It was Shirley's third win of the year.

Jack Kramer gave up seven hits in winning the first game, but he kept them well spaced and not a Chicagoan reached third. Two singles, a sacrifice, a base on balls and an error gave the Borwns three runs in the sixth to sew up that game.

Shirley was not as effective as Kramer, but his mates gave him a 2-0 lead in the second and then added four more on four singles and a double in the fifth.

Buck Ross came to the rescue of Humphries in the sixth and held St. Louis to three ineffective hits the rest of the way.

Cleveland, June 7 (AP).—Hal Newhouser racked up his sixth win of the season today, holding the Cleveland Indians to five hits for a 3-to-2 victory, which gave the series to the Detroit Tigers, two games to one. Allie Reynolds, trying for his fifth conquest, surrendered 10 hits in six and a third innings to be charged with the loss.

The Tigers shelled Reynolds from the hill with a five-hit, three-run attack in the sixth. Bob Maier and Paul Richards singled to start it, and Newhouser sacrifice. Jimmy Webb plated both runners with a single, and took third on Ed Mays' single. Roy Cullenbine scored Webb with the inning's fifth sinlge.

Cleveland scored in the seventh on Myril Hoag's triple and Don Ross' single, and again in the ninth on doubles by Frank Hayes and Mike Rocco.

Boston, June 7 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox captured a 10-inning decision from the Philadelphia Athletics, 5-4, today while completing an 18-game home stay with a total of 13 victories.

Catcher Bob Garbark's single with the bases loaded, drove in Pete Fox with the winning run with one out in the extra frame.

The Athletics gained a 4-1 lead, thanks to homers by Bob Estallella and Hal Peck, before starter Jim Wilson was relieved by the veteran Mike Ryba.

Ryba then held the visitors to one hit over the last four frames, a two-bagger by Estallella in the eighth.

Bob Johnson launched the Boston victory surge in the sixth by homering with Tommy McBride on base and, with two out in the seventh, Pete Fox doubled in McBride with the tying run.

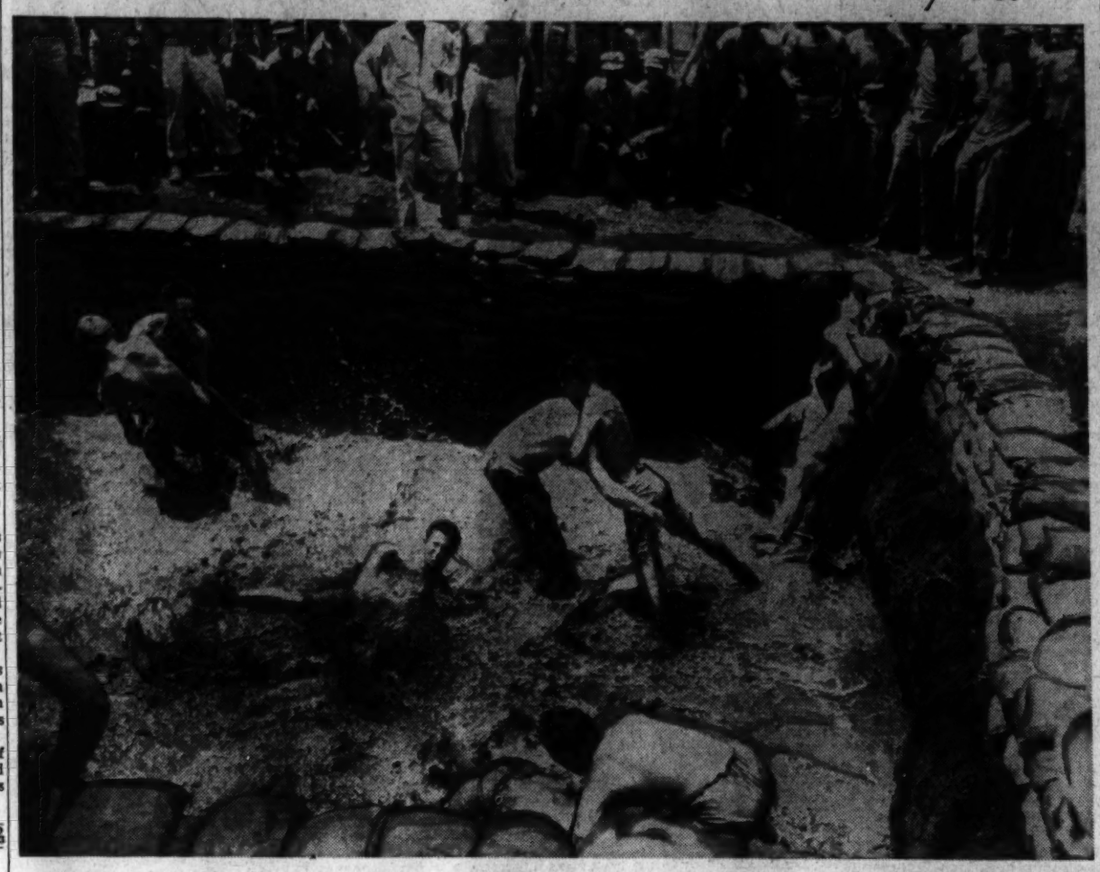
Marines' Idea of Nice, Clean Fun in Muddy Pit



U. S. Marine Corps Photo

This comes under the heading of recreation at a Marine rest camp in the Pacific. The idea of the free-for-all in the mud pit is to chuck the opposing team out of the arena. Anything goes in the goo, as you can plainly see.

Victor Gets Great Ride By Edens

Charles Town, W. Va., June 7.—Jockey Bobby Evans, leading rider at the meeting won two of the three purse races to today's program of the Charles Town Jockey Club. He won the sixth with Mrs. H. W. Boyle's Ene, getting the 4-year-old filly home by a neck margin. He took the seventh with Dean M. Rathbun's She's Scotch, booting the daughter of Double Scotch to the wire a length ahead of the closest opposition.

Jockey Patsy Grant rode the winner of the fifth, the other purse event. He won via the photo and then had to survive a claim of foul before the victory of El Toreador, owned by Eddie Samaha of Washington, D. C., was made official. JoJockey Frank Shaeffer, who rode the Shangrila Stable's Discretion into second position made the objection against the $4 favorite.

Edens put up a strong ride, to get Ene home in the sixth but he didn't do any more riding then Jockey Scotty Prain, aboard Glaster, a long shot. Ene, which paid $6.40, took the decision in a camera finish by a neck margin.

In the seventh, Edens and She's Scotch represented the longest shot on the board. He took the filly to the front and refused to allow her to quit, keeping her going and a length in front of Enrico Rinaldi's Flower Battle. She's Scotch paid a healthy $32.

The daily double paid $24.40 and Edens also had a hand in that. He rode W. V. Rose's Rollicking to victory at $6.40 after Woody Kirk won the first with C. Hadaway's Famas Time, a $5 shot.—HAIGHT.

Giants Beat Flock, 10-5, in Error Comedy

New York, June 7 (AP).—Brooklyn came within three misplays of the all-time National League record by committing eight errors today to help the New York iGants grab a 10-5 victory on only seven hits.

The iGants chipped in with two boots in the comedy of errors, witnessed by a large weekday turnout of 15,618 paying fans.

Van Mungo earned his sixth straight decision at Leroy Pfund's expense but neither starter was around at the finish as Leo Durocher paraded Clyde King, Tom Seats and Cy Buker to the hill drawing nothing but a series of wild pitches, walks and fielding boners.

Mungo had a shutout, 7-0 up to the sixth and had driven home two runs with a tremendous 400-foot triple to deep center field but he weakened in the eighth and gave way to Andy Hansen.

Two walks by Pfund, a wild peg by Catcher Clyde Sukeforth and a wild pitch gave New York a run in the second and Eddie Basinski's error, a sacrifice and singles by Mungo and Johnny Rucker added a second score in the fourth.

Five more unearned tallies came across in the fifth on a wild mixture of a dropped fly by Augie Galan, fumbled grounder by Luis Olmo, a wild peg by Basinki, a walk, Mel Ott's single and Mungo's three-bagger.

Galan also dropped Medwick's liner in the sixth for his second misplay and the Giants left field scored on Billy Jurges' double that bounced off the wall away from Dixie Walker.

Ed Stanky broke Mungo's shutout in the sixth when he walked, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on Goody Rosen's fly. After Galan strolled, Luis Olmo bashed his fifth homer into the right field stands for two more.

An error by Al Gardella and singles by Walker and Olmo sent Mungo to the showers in the eighth boosting the Dodger run total to five, but the Giants came right back with two in their half on Jurges' single, a walk, hit batsman, wild pitch and wild toss by Olmo.

Jockey John Beedle, Injured In Charles Town Spill, Dies

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Charles Town, W. Va., June 7.—Jockey John Beedle died in the Charles Town General Hospital this morning of injuries sustained in a five-horse spill in the eighth race of the local course last Saturday. Beedle, who was 33 years old, succumbed without regaining consciousness following head and neck injuries. Local doctors as well as a specialist from nearby Newton D. Baker Hospital attented the veteran rider.

Beedle, who had been riding more than 10 years, was aboard 9-year-old mare, Broomoria, in the fatal race. Running Riot, owned by R. M. Gustin, was running with the leaders midway the clubhouse turn when she stumbled and fell. Broomoria tripped and went down close to the inside rail. James Hamilton's Gay Victory then crashed into the struggling pile-up of jockeys and horses. Riders of two other horses, in back of the accident, jumped from their mounts. Jockeys John Hernandez and Bobby Edens were those to escape injury.

Jockey Sammy Palumbo, who rode Gay Victory, suffered a nose fracture and bruises while George Franklin escaped with lacerations of the jaw and head in the accident. Palumbo and Franklin have been released from the hospital.

Beedle is survived by two sisters and three brothers, one in the armed forces. Funeral services and burial will be at 10 a. m. Saturday morning at his birthplace and home at Mt. Jackson, Va.

One other fatal accident has occurred on this track. Jockey Joe Pannell died as the result of injuries sustained in a pile-up near the same spot during the 1943 December meeting.

The Sports Patrol:

Hoop Jr. Is Derby Favorite And Here's Reason: Arcaro

By Oscar Fraley

New York, June 7 (U.P.).—The boys who are doping the Kentucky Derby tonight down in the Blue Grass country certainly know their oats when they install Hoop Jr. as a prerace favorite in the run for the roses.

Not because the little Hoop is so much hoss, mind you.

Simply because a silk-clad citizen by the name of Edward Arcaro will be up on the Florida contractor's mount when they answer the bugle call at Churchill Downs come Saturday.

Edward, to state it mildly, is quite a rugged character aboard anybody's pony. The scion of the hardboot Arcaros is worth about two lengths in anybody's scratch sheet—particularly in the Kentucky canter.

Has Won Classic Twice

The olive-skinned little guy has won the jaunt of the juleps twice, aboard Lawrin in 1938 and Whirlaway in 1941. He's 29 now and he'd like to win its once more and tie the jockey winning mark before he starts creaking like the saddle leather he so often sits on.

And he sits on plenty. Enough to pilot all sorts of horses to total winnings of $773,850 in 1944.

Then, too, Eddie is particularly tough in Kentucky, because that's when he's strutting his stuff before the home folk. He was foaled at Newport, Ky., and made up his mind to be a race rider when he hopped the fence at Latonia as a rag-tag urchin. He's done quite well.

For today, Eddie rates as the race rider's race rider. In the days of his apprenticeship the stars of the saddle were men like Earle Sande and Laverne Fator. Well, Eddie's the big boy now.

Eddie Knows Horses

Yet he looks like any undersized file clerk who has to get a chair to reach the top drawer. Any evening will find him mowing the lawn at his comfortable Long Island home or mending the toys of his daughter.

But don't let that innocent appearance fool you. Eddie the hardboot knows his thoroughbreds. And he knows Hoop Jr. He should, for he brought the colt home first in the Wood Memorial.

That's why when the band plays "My Old Kentucky Home" at the Downs on Saturday there will be a lot of eyes on the colt carrying Arcaro. Boot Eddie up and let him go.

They won't make the mistake that a trainer made when Eddie first was breaking into the racing game. This erudite soul, sending his plater in a cheap mile affair, instructed Arcaro thusly:

"I want you to come out of the gate fast, but not too fast. I want you to lay fourth until the first turn, move up to third on the backstretch, be second at the far turn and then, at the head of the stretch, take the lead and come on to win."

The horse finished seventh.

"Didn't I tell you what to do?" screamed the trainer, catching Arcaro en route to the tack room. "Didn't I tell you to come out of the gate fast, but not too fast: to lay fourth at the first turn, move to third on the backstretch, be second at the far turn and then, at the head of the stretch, take the lead and come on to win."

"What?" Eddie squelched, "and leave the horse!"

Tar Trackmen Leave Today For NCAA Meet

Annapolis, June 7 (AP).—Capt.-elect Bill Patton and a 15-man squad will leave tomorrow morning for the National Collegiate Athletic Association's track and field meet at Milwaukee's Marquette University Saturday. Staying at home will be the Middie's hurled record holder, Clyde Scott, who has to take a reexamination.

Walt Barry is slated for duty in the mile run in Saturday's meet, while Randy Carlon and Floyd Cuff will step out in the four furlong chase.

Captain Patton heads the field men and wil ltoss the javelin with the best of the current collegians. Fred Bouwman will try and add the NCAA to his IC4-A and heptagonal victories.

The Tars are counting heavily on John Van Velzer and Texas Ralph Ellsworth, sprinters, for points, but could their team mate Bill Strickler squeeze in for a count, Navy's fondest hopes would be realized.

Teaming with Barry in the mile will be his shadow in last Saturday's Hep meet, Dich Hall. Having slumped a little in recent showings, Nick Smusyn hopes to redeem himself with a point-producing effort in the 2-mile grind.

Ball Kash, 440 artist; Newbold Smith, shotput; Art Bigley, middle distance ace; Frank Sorenson, heptagonal discus champion; Pete Colot, javelin, and Joe Hall, broad jumper, round out the strong Academy team.

Barry and Joe Hall are the only graduates that will compete for the big Blue and Gold varsity in the NCAA outing. Such stars as Ben Martin, who tied the Academy high jump record with a 6 ft. 2⅝ in. effort last Saturday; John Caskey, IC4-A 880 champ; Dick Maxson, low hurdler; Hal Hamberg, who got married yesterday, and Bert Atkinson, high jumper, will be lost to the team due to graduation.

Columbus, Ohio, June 7 (U.P.).—Manager Ray Blades of the St. Paul Saints was fined $10 by American Association President George Ttrautman today for using objectionable language to Umpire Hilt Steengrafe in Monday night's game at Louisville.

Nelson Paces Canada Open; Sets Record

Ste. Dorothee, Quebec, June 7 (U.P.).—Byron Nelson, currently the top American golfer, set a new record on the tough Islemere Course today, chalking up a nine-under-par 63 to take a big lead in the $10,000 open tournament of the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association.

The Toledo strokester was at top form as he shot four birdies on the first nine and came in with five more to take a six-stroke lead over two other U. S. golfers—Harold (Jug) McSpaden of Sanford, Me., and Jimmy Hines of Great Neck, N. Y.

Nelson finished with a 32 on the first nine and 31 on the second, never going above par and amazing the Canadian spectators with the specttaular accuracy of his iron shots. His putter was working well, for a change, contributing greatly to his nine birdies.

McSpaden, usually on the heels of Nelson, finished in that spot along with Hines today as they both posted 69s—3 under par. Both American golfers picked up three birdies, McSpaden starting his round with a par-breaker on the first green when he dropped a 25-foot putt.

Bobby Gray, Canadian professional from Toronto, finished next with a 71. He made the most spectacular shot of the day on the 395-yard eighteenth hole. With his ball 175 yards from the pin, Gray hit a solid five iron which bounced on the green and rolled straight into the cup for an eagle 2.

Cavalier Nine Defeated, 6 to 1

Charlottesville, Va., June 7 (AP).—Virginia's baseball team ended its campaigning against service rivals here yesterday when it bowed to the Naval Training Station Club from Norfolk, 6-1, in a game which was featured by the heavy hitting of the Sailors.

Dom Canigla held the Cavaliers to five widely scattered hits and scored the first NTS run in the third when he scored after receiving a free pass when walks loaded the bags.

Both teams counted in the fifth, Chuck Noe bringing in the lone Virginia tally on a double by Tex Richard after the Tars had pushed three runs across on doubles by Allen and Meyer.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

(Note—Today Drew Pearson awards the Brass Ring—good for one free ride on the Washington Merry-Go-Round—to Tom Clark, new Attorney General of the United States.)

When Tom Clark was called to the White House and told by President Truman that he was to be the next Attorney General, he was so surprised that he started to walk out one of the big French windows in the Executive Office.

"I guess you're a little flustered," laughed Truman, "the door's over there."

Only 46 years old, Clark had been planning to step out of the Justice Department for more than a year and go back to Dallas, his home town, to practice law. His elder brother was killed in an airplane crash and the family wanted Tom to come home to carry on the family law firm.

But, through some whim of fate, he stayed on in the Justice Department. However, he was planning to retire this summer, had even picked a new law associate to handle a branch office in Washington, when suddenly he got the surprise call from the White House.

Long Line of Lawyers

Of the four Cabinet appointments Truman has made, public attention unquestionably has focused more on this than any other. The new Attorney General happens to come from a long line of lawyers beginning with his great grandfather, William H. Clark, solicitor of the British government of Ireland, who came to this country in 1737. The next William H. Clark was chancery judge in Jackson, Miss., and a Confederate general, killed in the battle of Altoona, Ga. His son, another William H. Clark, was treasurer of Mississippi for 40 years.

On Clark's mother's side, another of his ancestors, Dr. Efram McDowell, the famous Kentucky surgeon, is honored by a statue in Congress' Hall of Fame; while an uncle, Judge T. S. Maxey, was United States district judge in Texas, and another uncle, Jim Clark, was proctor of the University of Texas. For him, Clark Field in Austin is named.

Despite this impressive line of ancestors, Tom himself is an easy-going, unpretentious person whom, when you first meet him, you wouldn't suspect of being one of the most important members of the Truman Cabinet. He talks as if he had all the time in the world and as if nothing worried him at all other than getting home to go sledding with his two children—where you will always find him on snowy Sundays.

Unlike most Cabinet members, traditionally addicted to spacious homes or swank apartments, Clark lives in a small house in a suburban development where his wife, Mary, daughter of a former Texas Supreme Court judge (William F. Ramsay), does most of her own housework and seems to thrive on it. She met Tom, by the way, when she lived at the Pi Phi house at Texas University and he lived in the adjacent Delta Tau house.

Tom drives down to the Justice Department in an old 1938 jalopy, picking up car-poolers on the way. He doesn't entertain much—his house is too small and the servant problem too difficult. But he has been active in professional and social circles and helped organize the Federal Bar Association, from whose presidency he just retired after shocking some of his Texas colleagues by demanding that Negro attorneys be admitted to membership.

Politicians Lick Chops

Unquestionably, Clark's appointment is the most important shift in the Truman Cabinet. The Attorney General of any Administration can make or break it—as Harry Dougherty once demonstrated. Antitrust cases, affecting the dividends of great corporations and the prosperity of little business, can either be started or smothered in the Justice Department. Income tax cases, affecting the powerful city machines of Chicago, New York, Boston, Jersey City—the machines which nominated Truman at Chicago—can be prosecuted or protected in Justice. Along with the Interior Department (in charge of public lands and oil), it is the greatest potential boodle-bag in the Government.

Already some of the politicians are licking their chops and sniffing the boodle. For instance, W. T. Burton, Louisiana oil operator who was mixed up with the old Governor Leche-Huey Long gang, has been under indictment on his personal income tax for $578,958 and on his corporate taxes for $135,839.

After a mistrial, Burton, together with two other defendants, S. W. Maxwell and L. Brown, last year offered to plead nolo contendere—in other words not contest the case and with no strings attached. However, present Attorney General Francis Biddle recommended jail sentences, the judge also let it be known he intended to impose jail sentences; so the defendants withdrew their nolo contendere plea.

However, on May 30, just seven days after Tom Clark's appointment as Attorney General, the tax-troubled gentlemen from Louisiana moved to continue their trial beyond June 4, and in so doing made this extraordinary statement indicating the politicians' faith in Tom Clark.

Boodle Hopes Hang High

They said:

"On May 23, 1945, President Truman appointed the Honorable Tom Clark of Texas as Attorney General of the United States, to succeed the Honorable Francis Biddle of Philadelphia, effective June 30; that Mr. Biddle has been the incumbent of that high office during most of the period of this case and your defendants feel that he has acquired perhaps unconsciously a point of view about this case and about conditions in Louisiana generally which make it very hard to obtain from him an impartial and unprejudiced attitude looking to a fair and reasonable solution of this six-year-old controversy . . .

"Defendants further feel that with a new administration coming into that high office, there is now a reasonable expectancy that during the next several months a reinvestigation by the Justice Department of the whole Burton affair can be applied for and obtained . . ."

In other words, the boys at the feed trough expect a lot from Tom Clark.

The above is just one illustration of the terrific pressure sure to be exerted on the young new Attorney General by "friends"—and he has plenty of them.

However, in the opinion of this observer, who has watched Clark close-up and carefully during a period of years, the "friends" are going to be bitterly disappointed. Somewhat like Harry Truman, from whom nobody expected much, Tom Clark has real ability to accept heavy responsibility when it comes, and handle it with honesty, forthrightness and vision. That is what Washington has needed recently—more diversification of responsibility and more building up of new men.

On the day, Clark's appointment was announced, Bob Hannegan phoned to congratulate him.

"Now that you've heard the good news," he said, "I want to tell you now that if I ever ask you to settle a case, you are to tell me 'No.' And you can remind me of what I said today if I forget what I said later.

"I want you to build up the toughest administration in the Justice Department this town has ever seen. Truman has got to have it, the Democratic Party has got to have it, and you're going to do it."

Hannegan meant what he said. And, though Francis Biddle, a great Attorney General, will be missed in Washington, he has developed a young successor who will make Justice Department history on his own.

New Navy 'Tigercat' Fighter Ready for Action Against Japs

Bethpage, N. Y., June 7 (AP).—A new Navy fighter plane, the twin-engine Grumman F7F "Tigercat," swiftest and most vowerful built for the fleet, is ready for action against the Japanese.

Although the number and size of guns carried by the Tigercat were not revealed, Navy officials said the full firepower volume could smash a big Japanese bomber in a single burst.

Some of the highlights of the sea service's latest sky fighter are:

1. Ability to climb steeply at better than a mile-a-minute.

2. Carrying a 4000-pound bomb load—greater than any other fighter—or a full size torpedo. It is also equipped with rockets.

3. A longer range than any previous fighter plane.

As the first twin-engine fighter used by hte Navy, the Tigeriat is powered by two 2100 horsepower double Wasp Pratt and Whitney radial air-cooled engines turning three-blade propellers.

Separated From Child by Second Husband's Jealous Attitude and Failure to Provide The Home He Could, Young Mother Asks Help

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a woman 27 years of age. I have been married twice. My first marriage lasted five years, and when my husband and I were divorced we had a daughter 9 months old. I went back to live with my mother, and she took care of the baby while I worked. Then I met and married my second husband.

I left the baby with my mother when we started housekeeping, as he was several thousands of dollars in debt and had no home. But he promised he would provide a home for her as soon as possible. That was five years ago. Today he is out of debt, and we have our own business and also own a house, but he has rented it to another family and insists he will not make them move until the war is over.

My mother and daughter live in a town 30 miles away. The child will start to school this fall, and I would like very much to take care of her when she starts to school. My second husband has a very jealous disposition and doesn't even like me to spend all day with my mother and daughter unless he can go with me. I am very unhappy about the situation. I know I cannot be satisfied without my daughter much longer. What should I do? N. B.

Conscience
Wakens Late

DEAR N. B.: The situation is pretty grim and I think I understand your state of mind. You are suddenly alarmed by the realization that your baby is growing up, that already you have squandered precious years in personally costly neglect of her; that your mother, in conscientiously doing the job you thrust on her, has become the child's real standby, the person she most loves and leans on; and that you mean scarcely more than a visiting acquaintance whom she calls "mama."

Heartsickly at grips with a sinking feeling of being, incredibly, an outsider looking in, you desperately desire with frightened urgency to bring her to live with you, in order to try to regain your forfeited footing. But stop a minute. It seems to me true love for the child would counsel and strengthen you to leave her where she is, if she and her grandmother are on good terms and content with the arrangement, rather than try to foist her on your meanly unwilling husband.

Leave Well
Enough Alone

VITALLY necessary to any child's mental and moral welfare, but thrice important to children shunted aside by divorced parents, is a consistent early history of mothering care supplied in familiar surroundings, to which they feel comfortably and securely attached; and where they feel, although perhaps not consciously, very much loved and wanted. Another thing: Few adults bear it in mind, but starting to school is a formidable and complicated transitional step into the larger world, which most children undertake with profound misgivings.

Their feeling about home, the self assurance or uneasiness it breeds in them, has a tremendous influence for better or worse on their school record—psychologically, socially and scholastically. So you could hardly have chosen a less opportune season to insist on uprooting your daughter—when in coming to you she would be helplessly exposed to her stepfather's surly opposition to housing her, and suffering great homesickness for her grandmother and the old neighborhood, while at the same time trying to get her bearings at school, in a community as remote from her past experience as, say, Indo-China is to yours. Since you are in no way equipped to meet the child's home needs, my advice is, leave her with her grandmother.

Town Talk

By Eva Hinton

LUNCHING informally with Mrs. Andre de Limur the other day, I met interesting Mrs. Parmely Herrick, who was down from New York for a visit with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Parmely Herrick, jr.

Mrs. Herrick, sr., is the daughter-in-law of the late Myron T. Herrick, famous U. S. Ambassador to France during and after World War I. Ambassador Herrick was greatly beloved by the French for his many deeds of courage and kindness and for his sympathetic nature.

His refusal to leave his post in Paris when the Germans were battering at the gates in the first World War gained for him an answering loyalty in the heart of every Frenchman.

The fact that the Ambassador spoke little French seemed to make no difference in the "entente cordiale." He spoke the universal language of the sympathetic smile or tear.

He was the ranking patron of every American charity in Paris. At one amateur performance, I remember, he was sitting in the front row with only a gypsy orchestra between him and the stage.

After my part in the show was finished (it consisted of walking across the stage in a golden gown whipped up by some "name" coutoriere) I joined some friends in the audience and found myself sitting next but one to Ambassador Herrick.

Suddenly the leader of the gypsy orchestra, who was standing with his back to us, bent over to pick up a piece of music off the floor and tore his pants right up the back from stem to stern with a resounding rip.

My embarrassment for the dignity of our show was acute 'til a quick look convinced me that every eye was on the stage and no one else had seen the disaster.

After the show, I was a bit shaken to discover that the Ambassador had not only the most sympathetic, but the quickest and most discreet eyes in the American colony in Paris.

When I was presented to him he said, "Ask this young lady what she saw and I saw and nobody else saw."

MRS. PARMELY HERRICK was accompanied to Mrs. de Limur's luncheon by Mrs. Herrick, jr., who was saying how much she misses Georgetown since moving to R st. down by Sheridan Circle.

Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss was asking for a clew from pretty Mrs. David Bruce as to what the latter preferred for a wedding present. Colonel and Mrs. Bruce have moved into their charming house in Georgetown after their honeymoon spent in Virginia.

Mrs. Bruce says she will probably take up her full-time war job again because her house runs so smoothly that she has time and energy to spare. How's that for a different slant on housekeeping?

Simple Meals Bride's Best Bet Until She Masters Cooking Art

It has always been a riddle to me why so many persons ridicule the bride and her cookery. Anyone who can read can cook simple meals. And it is only simple meals that the bride should attempt. A dessert that requires magician-like manipulation such as the stretching and pulling of a streudel to paperthinness is not for the novice.

Equipped with reliable receips, the ingredients and a bit of patience, any bride who can turn on a stove burner can serve simple meals that are delicious and nutritious—yes, even in wartime.

Organization is one of the cardinal rules for successful cookery. Worry and scurry will mar the fun of cookery—the food too. The paper and pencil method is a good way for the bride—write out the menu, write out the shopping list, write out the work plan. Then things will be near fool-proof.

One "made" dish is the best way for the bride to plan a menu. that for the bride to plan a menu that will take a minimum of doing. Today are given some simple menus that the bride with the will to succeed can execute easily. They are menus that the quite adequate for guest meals.

Dinner Menu

Chilled Vegetable Juice
Baked Fish Fillets
Boiled New Potatoes
Tomato-Cucumber Salad
Apple Crisp Coffee

The one "made" dish on this menu is Apple Crisp. It can be made in the morning or some time before the actual meal-getting time. The vegetable juice is placed in the refrigerator, well seasoned and ready to pour into glasses. The salad ingredients may be prepared ready to slice and mix with dressing. This leaves the preparation of the fish fillets and the well-scrubbed new potatoes in their jackets ready to plunge into a pot of boiling water. It will take the fish and small potatoes about the same time to cook. The recipe for the Baked Fish Fillets follows:

BAKED FISH FILLETS

Place 2 pounds fish filets in a shallow baking pan. Melt ¼ cup margarine and add ¼ cup lemon juice, ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Pour over fish. Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees, about 20 minutes. Remove fish to hot platter. Blend 1 tablespoon flour with ¼ cup cold water. Add to the liquid in baking pan and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Pour over fish. Serves four.

Doing with little meat is one of the necessities of wartime. However, this is no major tragedy, for other foods with distinctive flavors can compete with meat dishes. So if the bride can't buy steaks, roasts and chops she must look around for other dishes that will provide the necessary proteins formerly supplied by meat.

A mushroom casserole, a cheese and nut loaf served with tomato gravy or a casserole of squash can all give emphasis to menus that must of necessity be meatless. Casserole of Squash is delicious. When made with the quick-frozen squash it is a dish that is "easy as rolling off a log" to prepare.

Dinner Menu

Fresh Fruit Cup
Casserole of Squash
Savory Green Beans
Avocado-Grapefruit Salad
Pineapple Ice Cookies
Coffee

The above menu is easy to execute. The fruit can be prepared and placed in a closed container in the refrigerator, ready to place in serving dishes and splash with wine. The Pineapple Ice can be purchased ahead of time and placed in refrigerator tray, and the cookies bought at the local bakery. The casserole of squash is prepared this way:

CASSEROLE OF SQUASH

Defrost and heat 1 package of quick-frozen squash. Fry 1 sliced onion in fat until browned. To 1 cup milk add a pinch of ground cloves and a pinch of ground cinnamon. Cover bottom of greased casserole with toasted bread slices. Add layer of squash and some onion slices and moisten thoroughly with seasoned milk. Repeat layers until squash and onions are used. Cover with remaining milk and sprinkle with grated cheese and corn flakes. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, and bake for about 30 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

The Comercial Credit Co. plans to increase its capital and recommend to stockholders authorization of a 50 million dollars issues of preferred stock to replace the present shares in the same category, Board Chairman A. E. Duncan announced yesterday.

The directors have caled a special meeting of stockholders for Baltimore, July 16, 2 p. m., Eastern war time, to vote upon proposed charter amendments to permit issuance of the 500,000 preferred shares. The plan cals for sale of 25 million dollars of the new stock with a lower dividend rate than the 4¼ per cent of the $12,193,800 presently outstanding cumulative convertible preferred, which it is proposed to redem at $105 per share, plus accrued interest.

A registration statement about the exchange and sale of the new issue has been filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Under present plans, the new stock would be offered for public subscription about the middle of July through a Nation-wide underwriting group headed by Kidder, Peabody & Co. and the First Boston Corp., both of New York.

Upon completion of the proposed program, Duncan said, the net invested capital of the Commercial Credit Co. wil lbe in excess of 80 million dollars.

Alleghany Control Of C. & O. Allowed

The Alleghany Corp. yesterday won its long fight to obtain control of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad.

The Commission's decision was contrary to the recommendations made last March by C. E. Boles, assistant director of the ICC's bureau of finance.
